PINPOINT MOON LANDING; FOUR-HOUR FIRST LOOK

Pair Geared for Longest Stroll

'Wowee, Fantastic' Shout Pair as Moon Dust Flies

HOUSTON (AP) — Two lively American astronauts made a bull's-eye landing on the moon today, raised their flag and wise-cracked through a four-hour exploration of the black, powdery surface.

Before returning to their lunar ferry Intrepid, they set up five scientific instruments powered by the first nuclear generator on the moon.

In landing on the Ocean of Storms, Charles (Pete) Conrad and Alan L. Bean carried man's quest for the unknown to that alien soil a second time. They opened a new age of discovery, the first detailed exploration of the moon.

Their moonwalk was spoiled for earthlings when a camera transmitting the first color television pictures for the moon failed after 45 minutes. Experts at the Manned Spacecraft Centre believed the camera was accidentally pointed at the sun, burning the sensitive image tube. There was little hope it could be repaired.

The moment they landed on the moon, Conrad shouted: "Outstanding!" And Bean exclaimed: "I can't wait to get outside!" (See page 3.)

They were two jubilant men, chattering like a couple of chipmunks as they went about the important business of exploring the strange world where the gravity force is only one-sixth that on earth.

There was excitement in Conrad's voice when he spotted an unmanned Surveyor spacecraft resting only 600 feet away in the crater that had been their target for the pinpoint landing.

BOTH WERE HAPPY

Both men were exuberant as they gathered rocks and spotted strange mounds of rubble that they described as "fantastic." Conrad's cackling laugh became a familiar sound.

"Wowee" was a favorite expression as Conrad and Bean prowled the surface, ranging more than 1,000 feet to set up the experiments and to inspect the mounds and what appeared to them to be fresh crater.

The astronauts were amazed at the thick, black dust that darkened their space suits as they moved like ghostly figures in a weird surrounding.

"We're really filthy," Conrad reported.

The third member of the expedition, Richard F. Gordon Jr., became almost a forgotten man as he orbited some 65 miles overhead in the Yankee Clipper command ship, waiting for Conrad and Bean to complete their 31½-hour exploration trip.

But Gordon helped pinpoint the landing site by spotting both Intrepid and the Surveyor from his high-flying outpost.

Conrad and Bean steered Intrepid to its perfect landing on the eastern edge of the Ocean of Storms at 1:54:29 a.m. EST and became the third and fourth humans to leave their imprint in the lunar dust.

TWO STARTED WALKS

The first of two planned moonwalks started at 3:44 a.m. when Conrad backed down a nine-rung ladder and stepped ashore in the new world. Bean followed 31 minutes later.

Conrad spent a total of three hours 44 minutes outside and Bean an even three hours in temperatures above 150 degrees.

After stowing their gear and eating, they planned eight hours sleep, resting for the second excursion set to start at 9:32 p.m. today.

"We won't have any trouble sleeping tonight," Conrad reported after the exhausting walk.

Blastoff from the moon is slated for 6:23 a.m. Thursday and a linkup with the Yankee Clipper at 11:02 a.m. After an extra day in lunar orbit to photograph future landing sites, the three head for home and a splashdown in the Pacific.

The astronauts reported the soil was thicker and blacker than that in the Sea of Tranquillity where Apollo 11 pilots Neil A. Armstrong and Edwin E. Aldrin made man's first lunar landing in July.

"Your boots dig into the soil quite a bit," Bean said. "If you don't pick up your feet you really kick a load of dirt in front of you."

A-Power Up There

LITTLE HOPE HELD CAMERA WILL OPERATE

The second moon walk of astronauts Charles Conrad and Alan Bean is scheduled to begin at 9:40 p.m. today when Conrad steps to the lunar surface, followed seven minutes later by Bean.

The walk is scheduled to be covered for earthbound viewers beginning at 9 p.m. on Channel 8 and at 9:30 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

However, Apollo officials hold scant hope that the color camera taken to the moon will function. It failed early today but the astronauts will attempt to activate it at 9:32 p.m. before they step to the moon's surface.

Poverty Prober Warns of Riots

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada will be rocked with riots within five years unless poverty-ridden people achieve a decisive victory, Frederick Joyce, director of the Senate committee on poverty, said Tuesday night.

He told a news conference he feels Vancouver would be likely place for riots to begin.

"You have a really big welfare-poverty problem here," said Joyce, noting that Vancouver's mild climate drew down-and-outers from many parts of the country.

The committee, headed by Senator David Croll, is holding poverty hearings here today and Thursday.

The committee began its hearings in Ottawa last April and since then has held hearings in Halifax, Charlottetown and Winnipeg.

Mr. Joyce directs a staff of eight researchers and two secretaries who back up the committee. He said his people are still looking "for an authoritative statement on what causes poverty."

5% LIMIT URGED ON PAY BOOSTS

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Trudeau said in the Commons Tuesday he supports a suggestion that wage increases be limited to 5 per cent and price increases to 2½ per cent for a certain period.

He was replying to Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, who attributed the suggestion to John H. Young, chairman of the prices and incomes commission, in a Tuesday speech at Regina.

'Don't Intimidate' TV News: Committee

WASHINGTON (WP) — Several Congressmen who oversee the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) delivered a friendly, but blunt warning Tuesday to the agency's new Republican chairman—don't "intimidate" the news operations of network television.

Dean Burch, the newly-appointed chairman, responded with a firm denial that he had any intention of intimidation when he personally called the three networks and asked for transcripts of their commentaries on President Nixon's Nov. 3 speech on Vietnam.

One congressman said that "there's no question the lack of live coverage of the November mobilization was affected by the administration's action."

Freeze Cuts School Plans

By BOB MITCHELL

Spokesmen for two Capital Region school boards said today the tight money situation in provincial school construction financing could slow education department approval of projects already approved by ratepayers in referendums.

The government announced Tuesday lack of capital funds for school construction has forced a ban on all construction referendums and bylaws in Dec. 6 civic elections.

Resources Minister Ray Williston made the announcement for Education Minister Donald Brothers who is in Paris this week.

Williston said classroom needs for 1970 will be approved on an individual and emergency basis and, in an interview today, indicated the restriction will also apply to projects from past referendums that are currently awaiting education department approval.

The government move affects a total of 34 referendums in B.C., including the following Island districts: Cowichan, Qualicum, Alberni, Courtenay, Campbell River and Gulf Islands.

VIC WEST HIT?

Trustee Peter Bunn, chairman of Greater Victoria school board buildings and grounds committee, said today a number of projects already under way from previous referendums could be delayed by the tight money situation.

An addition to Victoria West elementary has been at the education department since July awaiting approval to call tenders, Bunn said.

"The most reprehensible thing is that the minister—little Brothers—should stand up at the trustees convention in October and say we should aim at building 1,000 classrooms a year.

"Then the moment he's out of the country, big Ray (Williston) comes in and announces this, and that's when you find out who's really in command.

"The whole philosophy of education building in B.C. is 'We build today for yesterday,' when we should be building today for tomorrow."

Full Planning Study For Gulf Area Urged

The Capital Regional Board will be asked next week to approve an immediate start to a full planning study in the Gulf Islands.

The request will be made by the Capital Region Planning Board, which at its meeting Tuesday received a feasibility study on the islands which will be forwarded to the regional board.

The study, prepared over the last few months by planning board officials, details the "unregulated and extensive development" in the Gulf Islands.

Figures and maps showed a rapid increase in subdivision over the last few years, with subdivisions scattering in different places.

'WITHOUT GOALS'

The feasibility study said development is occuring without prior goals for the islands and objectives to achieve these goals.

Small lot subdivision (roughly two acres and less) had produced 3,144 lots between 1959 and 1968, "a very high figure comparable to a metropolitan suburb," said planning board staff member John Northey.

Large-parcel vacant land sales between 1960 and 1968 showed 8,100 acres involved — almost twice the land area of the city of Victoria. Northey called this "large, even in metropolitan centres."

Total sales, vacant and improved land, in the same period showed the dollar value more than tripling — from $2.1 million in 1960 to $7.7 million in 1968.

700% INCREASE

Vacant land value trends saw some property increasing by as much as 700 per cent in the same period.

Trends indicated a higher percentage of permanent homes in new subdivisions — 55 per cent of dwellings being erected on Salt Spring Island were permanent, although in the outer islands 72 per cent were summer or temporary.

Population, however, remained steady — it was 3,018 in 1961 and 3,151 in 1966, an increase of 133. But this is explained by the fact census

ARCTIC MELTING GREAT FOR RUSSIANS BUT . . .

Scientist Fears Ice Age

By JOHN MIKA

Every motorist stepping on the gas is speeding the world straight into another ice age.

The cold collision could come within 1,000 years —many of our lifetimes away but only an instant in geological time.

That's what the dean of Canada's oceanographer's worries about in his retirement.

He's Dr. J. P. Tully, who turns 63 later this month after a distinguished career as head of the Pacific fisheries research group from 1945 to 1966 and secretary of the Canadian Committee on Oceanography until a few months ago.

During that time he became internationally recognized as an expert in such areas as prediction of pollution in oceans, hydraulics of seaways, airborne radiation and the mechanics of heating and cooling in the sea.

He's here keeping in touch at the CCO's annual meeting in the Empress Hotel.

Tall, muscular and vigorous despite his white hair, he exudes humor and warmth as he listens to the dreams of the "youngsters" at the conference, but his own tale warns of a nightmare coming if man continues thoughtlessly defiling his environment.

Because of his specialties, reporters asked him for comment on Russian suggestions for warming up the Arctic Ocean to provide better transportation possibilities.

. . . FREEZE CUTS SCHOOL PROJECTS

year of school construction at the B.C. School Trustees' Association's annual convention. The record followed a government freeze on school construction during 1968.

Bryan Shaw, superintendent of buildings and grounds for the Saanich Peninsula board, said restrictions on current projects appear to be imminent, although Williston did not specify them in his Tuesday announcement.

WRITING ON WALL

"We have no official notification of further restrictions, but I think the writing is one the wall."

School boards are being hurt economically by the pattern of school construction activity: a flurry of building, followed by a government-imposed lull.

"We swing wildly between a period of construction approvals, with the prices up in the sky, and the other extreme when it would be very economical to build."

The ideal situation would be a steady flow of uninterrupted construction, not one of feverish activity that drives prices up, Shaw said.

DIFFICULT

"It's very difficult for a school board to function economically when it doesn't have any knowledge of when approvals will be given.

"It's like a jigsaw puzzle with the main piece missing, or an arch with the keystone missing."

Williston was asked today whether projects from past referendums will be affected by the tight money situation:

"No, provided they (school boards) can prove they're needed on an emergency basis."

The minister said his Tuesday announcement had been misinterpreted by school board officials and news media.

"People are saying it's because the government is short of money. That isn't the case. This isn't a B.C. situation, it isn't a Canada situation, it isn't even a U.S. situation.

"It's a general problem."

The government raises capital funds on behalf of school boards.

Asked why the announcement of the referendum ban had been made while Education Minister Brothers was out of Canada, Williston replied:

"For the simple reason that the people involved have to have the information on the emergent situation before the end of November and Mr. Brothers won't be back by then."

He said Tuesday the ban on referendums is not a construction freeze like the one imposed 18 months ago, but added:

"In the light of the availability of capital funds, it seems from the government standpoint that basic classroom needs must be met on a first-priority basis."

In place of normal procedure for referendums and borrowing, emergency provisions will be used. Section 217 of the Public Schools Act gives the cabinet discretionary power to allow school construction as it sees fit.

TWO ADDITIONS

A $1.47 million referendum had been slated in the Cowichan school district for additions to two junior secondary schools.

Superintendent Eric Lewis said today postponement of the referendum will mean the board has to produce explicit projections of student population in the district to get permission to go ahead on construction.

"We're talking about acutely essential classrooms, and if you want to build you have to show that a certain number of students will be coming along at a certain time."

Gulf Islands district planned a $472,000 referendum Dec. 6 to build a new elementary school on Saltspring Island.

Campbell River had a $1 million referendum planned for next spring.

Courtenay had a $3 million money vote for enlargement of existing schools.

Qualicum district ratepayers defeated a referendum in September, and the board had requested permission to hold another vote for $1.2 million during the civic elections.

No referendum had been planned in the Alberni district, but the board has been negotiating with the department of education for permission to proceed with a $610,000 second phase of its current building program.

. . . ICE AGE FEARED

While it might give a slight advantage to the Russians by turning their Northwest Passage into a year-around navigable channel, it would be disastrous immediately for Canada and eventually catastrophic for the world, he answered.

THE REASONS

Here's why:

Virtually all of Canada's Arctic islands and even much of its continental northern slope is founded on permafrost as much as 1,400 feet thick and breaking this up by warming the seas would literally "melt away" much of our north.

But even greater changes would occur, sending the polar ice cap down over most of the temperate regions of the earth again.

"We now get dry, continental air coming from the north. In the Northwest Territories, the rainfall is less than five inches a year and the Arctic areas are essentially desert," he said.

There's little snow because the Arctic Ocean is covered by ice so there's virtually no evaporation of water into clouds for subsequent precipitation.

RAIN WOULD START

"Now supposing we turned that into open water (by heating). We would start to get rainfall for part of the year and snow most of the year," he said.

"Now they way you build glaciers is to lay down, let's say, 100 inches of snow in a year and only melt off 99 so that there is a net gain every year.

"Now carry on this process for 1,000 years — and we've got ourselves an ice age — a polar ice cap over the world's northern land mass.

"So leave the bloody thing alone — it wouldn't take very long."

Dr. Tully brightens momentarily, pointing out there is no invention yet known — not even the hydrogen bomb — which is capable of warming up the Arctic Ocean sufficiently to make much difference.

NOT SIGNIFICANT

"There is this business of reversing the flow in the Bering Straits but it's flow is so small compared to everything else that the arithmetic I've done says the effect would not be measurable."

Then his face darkens.

Because civilized man, including the Russian but especially the North American, is beginning to warm up the Arctic Ocean indirectly.

"As a matter of fact, we're on the way to doing it right now.

"We're burning fossil fuels now and we're generating carbon dioxide furiously all over the place, automobiles and the whole bit, right?"

That carbon dioxide floats up to the upper atmosphere and creates a steadily thickening, blanket particularly as a high-level blanket over modern supercities like Los Angeles, New York, Tokyo and the metropolitan rims of the Great Lakes.

LIGHT ABSORBED

As every high school physics graduate knows, the earth absorbs the sun energy in the form of light and radiates it back into space as heat, sayd Dr. Tully.

But the carbon dioxide blanket won't let heat escape as rapidly as it has in the past.

"So now we have ourselves a greenhouse effect and things will start to warm up pretty fast.

"The danger of carbon dioxide pollution of the upper atmosphere is . . . the Arctic will warm up too."

With the geometrically-expanding use of fuel oils, the unnatural warming process could accelerate and bring back the ice age in double-quick time.

"There has been a measurable increase in (world) temperatures in the last five years already," he said.

"And at least 50 per cent of this is from the greenhouse effect. So there's the story."

Opening on Deadline Pledged for Institute

The Eric Martin Institute will be opened by Jan. 12 Royal Jubilee Hospital senior officials said today.

The opening deadline was the same as that agreed on when they met with Health Minister Ralph Loffmark Nov. 13, said a joint statement from Dr. A. C. Pickles, Jubilee administrator, and J. Courtney Haddock, board president.

"At that time we were given assurance by the minister that the physical plant would be modified to provide safe patient care in accordance with requirements set down by the general medical staff of the Royal Jubilee Hospital."

BUDGET PROMISED

Further, they said, the minister has given a firm assurance that a satisfactory and reasonable operating budget will be provided.

Today's statement followed an ultimatum issued by the minister Monday that the province would take over the 120-bed unit if there were no patients receiving care by Jan. 12.

Plans call for the institute to be run as part of the Royal Jubilee Hospital complex.

Haddock said there has been no change in Royal Jubilee's policy or program.

He added that the institute "is and will be a department of psychiatry, run by our own medical staff, headed by our own chief of psychiatry and chief of staff, and will definitely be a part of the hospital complex."

SYMPATHETIC

Fifteen psychiatrists, whose patients would be receiving care at the institute, had approached the minister for improvements.

Haddock said he is sympathetic toward the psychiatrists' requests, "but some of them are recently arrived here, and we just don't have a quarter of a million dollars to give them."

He said that he is concerned about pressure being put on the hospital's planning and administrative staff.

"They're working to midnight night after night, and the strain is beginning to show. It's just not fair on them."

Planning Merger Attempt Refused

North Saanich has said no to a voluntary agreement on a draft proposal to merge the Capital Region Planning Board with the multi-purpose Capital Regional Board.

The rural municipality's decision was disclosed Tuesday at a planning board meeting by its representative, Ald. Trevor Davis.

He said North Saanich council has decided the "transfer is not to the interests of the municipality at this time and therefore does not approve the letters patent as proposed."

In the other six municipalities on southern Vancouver Island, Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Central Saanich have voiced approval. Sidney and Esquimalt have reported no decision, but no opposition to the proposal.

The provincial government earlier indicated that its funds to the Capital Region Planning Board will be stopped this spring.

The move was designed to get local municipalities to agree among themselves on the terms of transfer to the Capital Regional District, which is reponsible for such area-wide problems as trunk sewers and outfalls and regional parks.

Later, planning board chairman Victoria Ald. Ian Stewart said the regional planning function will be transferred "but now I can't guarantee it will be in the form of the proposed draft, although the minister (of municipal affairs, Dan Campbell) may take our efforts into account."

Saanich Ald. Edith Gunning told the board enough time has been spent on this issue and she hopes "we can turn our attention to having a regional plan drawn up."

This work is expected to start in earnest early next year as the 1959 regional plan is updated. Already, this year, a number of study sessions have been held.

Extension Bid Refused

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Kamloops' proposal to extend its boundaries, which would have added 1,548 acres and more tax revenue, was rejected Tuesday by Dan Campbell, municipal affairs minister.

Campbell cited "objections raised in the areas involved." He said Kamloops can submit revised plans but Mayor Peter Wing said this could not be done in time for Dec. 6 municipal voting.

The mayor said rejection of the proposal, which was opposed by the Kamloops Ratepayers and Tenants Association, cost the city $30,000-$35,000 in additional taxes it could have received this year.

Hotel, Store Project Approved

VANCOUVER (CP) — City council Tuesday approved in principle the development of a controversial $40,000,000 hotel, apartment and specialty store project at the entrance to Stanley Park.

The new, preliminary design provides that the hotel unit be located farther back from the park entrance, and apartment towers be spaced wider apart.

The developers, Four Seasons Hotels Ltd., said the changes answers earlier criticisms that the project initially proposed was too close to the park and the buildings would cut off the view of harbor and mountains now enjoyed by residents south of the area.

. . . GULF

figures show permanent residence and don't indicate the summertime residence in the islands of people who live elsewhere.

'URGENCY'

A breakdown of the permanent residence of small lot purchasers, in a sample of all parcels of land, showed 236 from the Vancouver area, 143 from the Gulf Islands, 55 from the Pacific Northwest and California, 46 from the Victoria area, 10 from other parts of Canada, eight from other parts of British Columbia and three listed as "other."

Tony Roberts, planning board director, recalled that Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell has ordered a 10-acre subdivision minimum in the Gulf Islands.

This has two major effects on the feasibility study program:

1. There is "an extra urgency" because new local subdivision control standards, for example, are required as soon as possible and this means the full planning program should follow immediately on the feasibility study;

2. Subdivision control was one of the local planning devices to be considered in the study, but with the minister's decision it is mandatory that recommendations be provided on a policy for subdivision control.

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

If the weather all over the United States isn't getting colder than it has been on the average during the past few years, then some facts of history are not proving out very well. According to those facts we ought to have just about the coldest 10 years, commencing a year ago, that we've had in many a decade.

In France there began a prolonged cold period in 1784. The weather kept getting colder and colder and the people in France kept getting more and more rebellious until it all came to a head in 1789 when the revolution broke out. During the 33 years that followed, the weather continued colder than usual.

History shows that man is more militant when the weather is colder. The way things are going around here, with violence of every kind increasing and with no solution in sight, the weather ought to get cold enough pretty soon to freeze us all. According to history, a good long warm spell will spell the end of violence.

FLIGHT OF APOLLO 12

Man Returns to the Moon

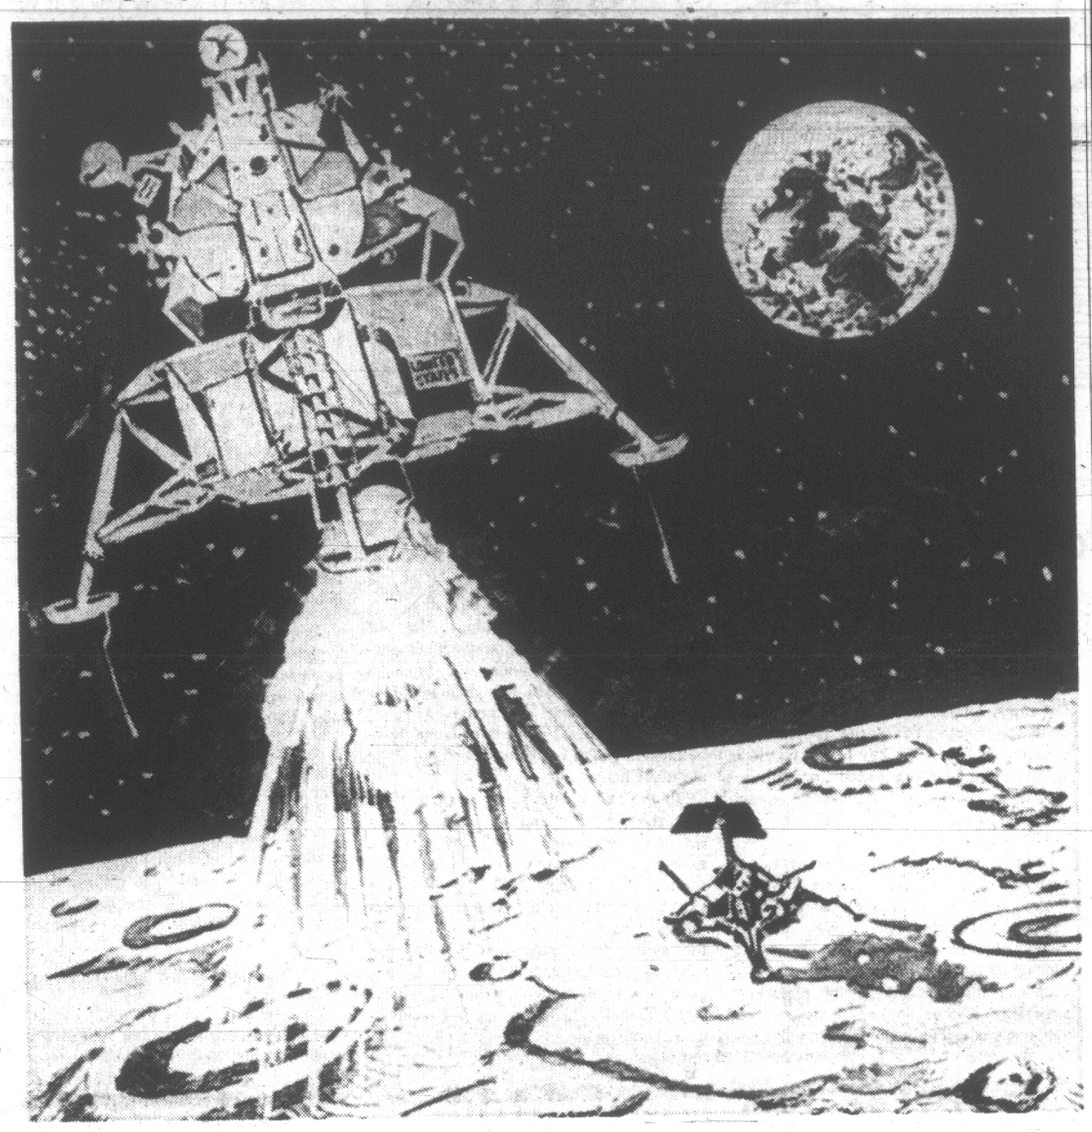

"Tranquillity Base here. The Eagle has landed."

With those words, spoken at 4:18 p.m. Sunday, July 20, 1969, the species of man was ushered into a new era.

Neil Armstrong, who at 10:56 p.m. tbe same day became the first human being to walk on the face of the moon, uttered them in the historic moment when the lunar landing craft settled on the surface of earth's closest celestial neighbor.

Those seven words signified the beginning of the most sophisticated step so far in the evolution of mankind—his transformation from a terrestrial being to a universal one.

Today, two more men from earth are walking on the moon, helping to push further back the new boundaries of humanity's domain.

ARTIST'S CONCEPTION of lunar landing of Apollo 12's Intrepid shows module descending near Surveyor 3, the unmanned craft which has been on moon's surface for two and one-half years.

LITTLE APPREHENSION . . .

Exuberance and Excitement Mark Intrepid's Landing

HOUSTON (AP) — Apollo 11 had history, uncertainty and danger. Apollo 12 had pure exuberance and excitement. So much that you almost forgot about the danger.

Across 250,000 miles of space you could almost picture Pete Conrad jumping up and down with joy as the lunar lander Intrepid bore down on the Ocean of Storms exactly the way it was supposed to.

●

"There it is!" he shouted. "Son of a gun. Right down the middle of the road."

And Alan Bean, standing beside him reading out the computer's figures, joined in: "Outstanding!"

Down, down, came the Intrepid. And the excitement mounted.

Conrad was like a kid seeing his first circus elephant.

"Hey, it's right down the centre of the crater!" he yelled. The moon's horizon was coming up in the Intrepid's little windows.

●

"Forty-two," Bean said, calling out the degree of the ship's bearing. "Look out there."

Conrad again: "I can't believe it! Amazing! Fantastic!"

"Forty-two degrees," Bean said again. "Ride it in. Forty-two. We're passing 3,500 feet."

It seemed superfluous, but Mission Control had to say it:

"Intrepid, Houston. You're go for landing."

"I just want to land to the right a little."

"Forty degrees, Pete, 40 degrees," said Bean.

"That's so fantastic, I can't believe it," Conrad said.

"We're at 2,000 feet," Bean again.

Then the dramatic final minutes, with Bean narrating:

●

"Thirty-eight, 38 degrees. 36 degrees. You're 1,200 feet, Pete. Thousand, feet coming down at 30. You're looking good. Got 14 per cent fuel. Looks good out there, Babe, looks good."

Down, down came the Intrepid; 800 feet . . . 680 feet . . . 600 . . . 530. Bean counted them off.

"Four-seventy-one," he said. "You are all right. 426."

It was the signal for Conrad to take over from the computers, his hand on two airplane-type controls.

★ ★ ★

HOUSTON (AP)— When Neil Armstrong, 5-foot-11, stood on the moon last July, he said: "That's one small step for a man; a giant leap for mankind."

When Charles Conrad, 5-foot-6 stretched to reach the moon from the landing pad today, he said: "That may have been a small one for Neil, but that's a long one for me."

★ ★ ★

"I got it," he said.

"Four hundred. You're at 366, Pete, 356. Okay."

"I gotta get over here to the right."

"You're at 330 feet," Bean said. "Got lots of gas."

On Apollo 11, in July, there was not a lot of gas.

"Hey, look at that crater!" Bean shouted. "Right where it's supposed to be. Hey, you're beautiful. Ten per cent, 257 feet coming down at five feet per second, 250, coming down at five. Hey, you're really manoeuvring around. Come on down, Pete. Okay. Ten per cent fuel, 200 feet, coming down at three. You can come on down."

Down, down came the Intrepid.

●

"Start the clock," said Bean, "42 feet coming down at two . . . 40 coming down at two . . . Looking good. Watch the dust . . . 31 . . . 30 feet . . coming down Pete. You got plenty gas. Plenty gas. Hang in there."

"Thirty seconds," said Mission Control.

"Coming down at 2!" Bean was shouting again. "We've got it made. Come on in there, 24 feet. Contact lights!"

Two more men from earth were on the moon.

Less Than Admirable

WITH HEALTH MINISTER Loffmark's imposition of a January 12 deadline for occupancy of the Eric Martin Institute, the problem of this highly controversial mental hospital is reaching a climax. Ostensibly completed last February and turned over to the Jubilee Hospital administration in September, the multi-million-dollar building is still empty except for daytime activities of the Mental Health Association. But all these months the Jubilee's Bay Pavilion has been sorely overcrowded with psychiatric patients, and the 50 beds that will be made available for general hospital use when the Pavilion is vacated are still urgently needed.

The whole history of the new psychiatric hospital has apparently been a procession of bungling and misunderstandings. The layman has heard a succession of charges and replies that leave him baffled.

The 170-bed institute, having been built, was suddenly decreed to be eligible for federal financial aid to the extent of only 120 beds, apparently a required proportion of the total Jubilee hospital accommodation. Thus 50 beds had to be opened to some other type of patient. Mr. Loffmark has now announced these must be retarded children, and that the hospital may not be opened until their ward is in use.

Jubilee Hospital administrators said they could not open the Institute because they did not have sufficient funds to carry it for the initial weeks of operation, whereas the provincial government would not provide operating funds until the institution was in active use.

Back of all these frustrations was the opinion of most local psychiatrists that the building itself was unsuited to modern psychiatric treatment. These complaints have been transmitted to Mr. Loffmark and probably include earlier criticisms that the building is terrifyingly high for emotionally upset patients, that the stairwells are open and out of the vision of the nursing stations, that electro-shock and insulin therapy rooms — vital in present-day treatment programs —had not been provided, nor had recovery rooms been built.

It was claimed that the large ward rooms, supervised by a nurse at a desk, left patients with no option but to sit in chairs around the wall—when the space should have been broken up with partitions to provide comfortable corners for conversation, consultation and relaxation in a non-institutional environment. Sound-proofing was absent. As one critic put it: "They have built a 50-year-old hospital."

Admittedly, the designers of the hospital originally had to pick their way between conflicting schools of thought on overall psychiatric treatment. But there seems to have been a distressing lack of communication with the local professionals who will use the facility, resulting in delays and added costs that are only now being straightened out.

In a private industrial project this sort of a record would result in drastic action. There is little in the whole long-drawn-out development to give much satisfaction to anyone —particularly patients and taxpayers, who seem to have been forgotten in the welter of controversy and excuses.

Waiting Game in Spain

THE REIGN IN SPAIN STAYS mostly in General Franco's hands despite the recent cabinet house-cleaning and the announcement that Prince Juan Carlos will eventually assume the throne.

Gone are most of the old Falangists—fascists would be a less euphemistic term — including three septuagenarian service ministers. They have been replaced by young men of the Opus Dei movement. Calling itself a movement of Catholic laymen devoid of political parties, Opus Dei moved into the top position of Spanish industry almost by osmosis. Now, under Franco's blessing, its members are entrenched in government. Mistrustful of democracy, the Opus Dei has been described as paternalistic at home but liberal in its approach to the concept of capitalism and vigorous foreign trade.

It is no coincidence that cabinet changes occurred just as Spanish officials began talks with representatives of the European common market about future trading agreements. But "El Caudillo," as Franco is called, has not named anyone to replace him in the key post of prime minister. At 76 he is a cautious man, and probably waiting to see how his Opus Dei cabinet sits with the people. And well he might.

Spain is still a political mixture of fascists, monarchists, conservative Catholics, republicans, liberals and even a few communists and anarchists. Putting that concoction on to boil after 30 years of Franco might well endanger Spain's economic progress.

In economic terms Spain has come a long way since the last shot was fired in the civil war of 30 years ago. But the Spanish people are impatient. For too many years they have watched their common market neighbors grow affluent. Spanish workers who journey north to the factories of France and Germany return with tales of el dorado.

Perhaps Franco's cautious flirtation with political progress will lead to a responsible democratic government. Last summer the streets of Barcelona and Madrid hummed with commercial activity. Tourists came in record numbers and business was good. Nevertheless, a man carrying signs that respectfully asked the regime for free elections was whisked off Madrid's streets before he could carry his message more than a few blocks.

Spaniards are a patient people. They have had to be. But after 30 years of waiting their patience may be wearing thin as most of their neighbors grow fat under democracy.

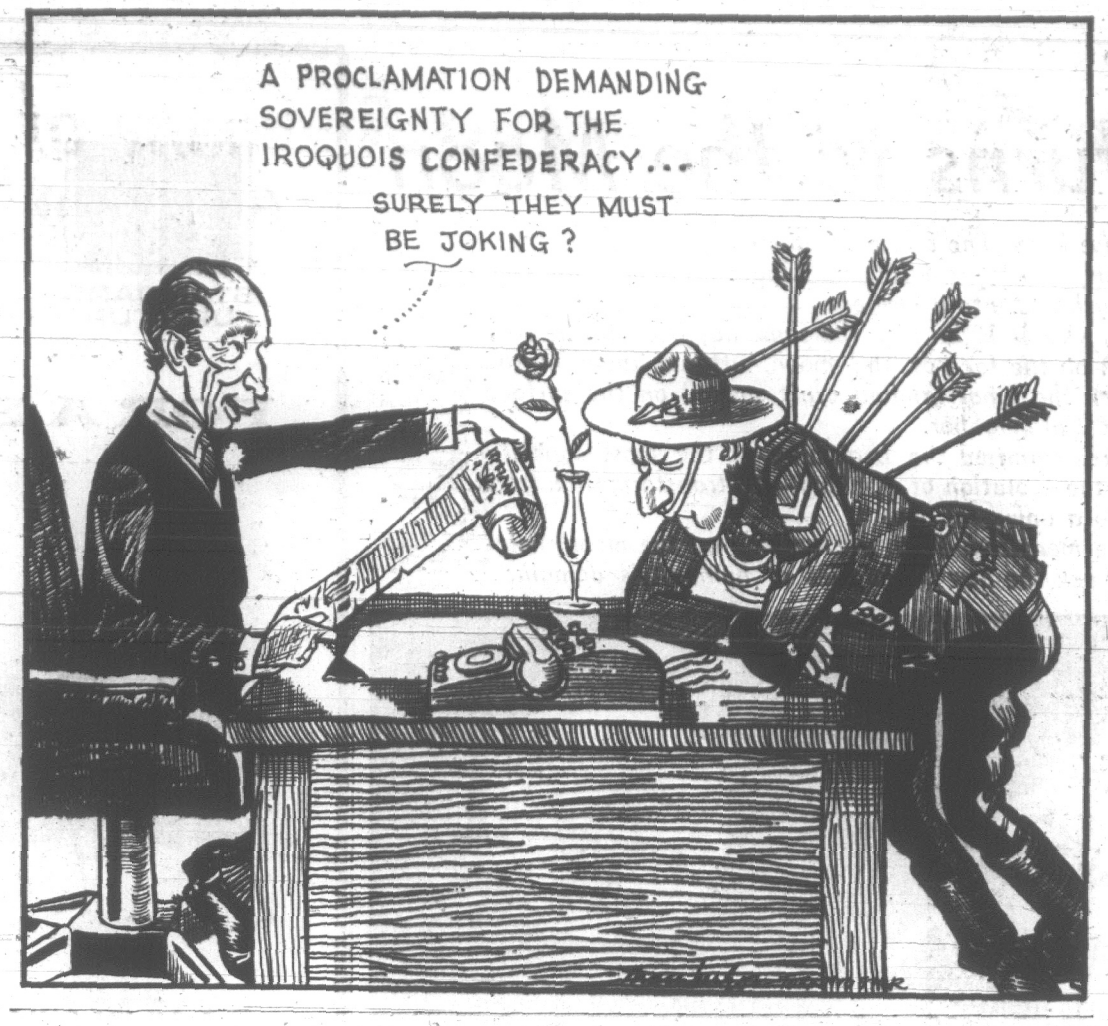

Voice of the Federation

IT SHOULD COME AS NO SURprise to Canadians that the federation of St. Jean Baptiste societies has voted for "total political sovereignity of Quebec."

Last year Prime Minister Trudeau braved taunts and flying bottles while viewing the societies' annual Montreal parade. This year the federation snubbed Ottawa entirely at parade time. The handwriting was on the wall for some time. Now the questions are, how many of the 165,000 St. Jean Baptiste members will go all the way with separatism, and how many Quebecois will they influence?

Never a milk-toast organization, the federation has always taken a militant stand on French-Canadian culture. But "I told you so" alarmists in English-speaking Canada would do well to remember that Quebec's population is more than 5,800,000, and the 165,000 federation members are a minor force numerically.

It is the federation's right to opt for separatism. However, three chapters—Quebec City, Sherbrooke and Valleyfield — have withdrawn from the federation over the separatism issue. Premier Bertrand says he is confident the great majority of Quebec's population supports Canadian unity. If he is correct the federation may have entered upon a dead-end avenue.

IN NATAL-MICHEL — By JAMES H. GRAY

Be It Ever So Humble, It's Inexpensive

FOR a stark object lesson in how inflation unhinges people, the place to look is in the Crow's Nest Pass. Here the giant Kaiser Resources Corporation is discovering that when given a choice between money and housing, people will opt for housing. So the corporation's desire to obliterate the town is being frustrated. Natal-Michel is the epitomy of the coal mining town, ugly and unattractive beyond salvation or even description. It is two miles long and two blocks wide in an environment ruined by the eternal grime of its coal mining economy. It is a town without a single amenity — no park, no picnic area, swimming pool, library, movie.

Gray

There is only a main street pock-marked by crummy stores between rows of grubby houses. It is the kind of town one would imagine the residents would want to flee at the first opportunity. Instead, they hold on for dear life.

To reach Natal-Michel you drive through a succession of sub-marginally depressed areas — Belleville, Blairmore, Coleman, etc., where the coal mines have closed down. Here the mines stayed open. The high-quality Michel coking coal has been much in demand by the Japanese. In addition to the sub-surface mine, Kaiser is readying a huge strip-mine operation 30 miles to the north.

Assembly Yard Needed

In order to accommodate the unit trains which will move the new production to the coast, a large assembly yard is needed. The only place in this narrow valley where it can be put is right here, in the narrow strip now being occupied by the miners' shacks.

For almost five years the company has been trying to buy out the miners and get them to move to an attractive new sub-division it is building in a nearby valley. It is everything this town is not. It is clean, brightly painted, with wide streets, well-treed large lots, playgrounds, schools. That compares with shack-houses built sometimes three-to-a-lot in Natal-Michel.

Most of the old houses were do-it-yourself projects by their original owners. Many are only rudimentary modern. Most are unpainted and unkempt. When Kaiser agents started their buying spree they offered between $3,000 and $4,000. The aged miners who had talked about selling out and moving away were first to sell.

It was not long before other residents decided to hold out for higher prices. Those who sold discovered in their coal-town isolation what little housing $4,000 would buy anywhere in Canada. Yet, while resistance hardened, the buyers made headway until today only 80 of the 300 owners are holding out. But they are the tough ones.

Dollars and Roots

Some are only interested in money. One woman said she needed $10,000 with which to move to Fernie so was holding out for that figure. Her neighbor two doors away, however, was not interested in any dollar figures she had heard.

"I'll be the last one left in Michel," she said, "because I ain't moving. My folks brought me here as a baby and I've lived here all my life. I just plain ain't going to move," she said. The two neighbors were separated by a couple of piles of kindling wood where two other houses had been. When the company gets possession of the houses it simply calls in its bulldozers and converts the houses into kindling, which usually is hauled away and burned.

There is not a single structure in town worth salvaging and moving to another site. The main hotel was bulldozed down and burned where it had stood. There are a dozen or more piles of splintered houses waiting to be hauled to the burning and the bulldozing will go on all winter. But not on the lots of the 80 resisters.

The new sub-division is so superior to the town, and so attractive in every way that the resistance of the townsfolk is puzzling at first. The key to the puzzle is money. The $4,000 or $5,000 they can get for their shacks will be barely enough for a down payment in the new subdivision.

But a down payment means heavy monthly payments for the next 20 years. Why should they take on so heavy a burden when they can live in their shacks for practically nothing? Kaiser has no argument for people who prefer cost-free inferior housing to high cost superior housing. Perhaps in the end, a hold-out woman soliloquized, they'll trade us the new houses for our old ones.

That hardly seems likely. In the meantime the kindling conversion proceeds apace and provides the holdouts with all the firewood they will need for the winter. Some will have kindling enough for several winters because those bulldozers make big piles out of even the smallest houses.

In the end it will come down to this: If Kaiser ever wants to get this town out of the way of its expansion plans, a substitute for money will have to be found. The money they are offering simply won't provide a roof over the sellers' heads. They could hardly replace the shacks they now live in with the sums being offered. Yet if Kaiser did not need the land, no one, even half sane philanthropists, would buy these properties at any price.

Letters to the Editor

Praise From Archie

May I congratulate the Mayor and members of the City Council who gave the go-ahead signal to the erection of the new fifty-metre swim pool?

I have taught and coached swimming for over 50 years and have been proud of the many fine youngsters who represented Victoria on Canada's Olympic and British Empire Games Swimming Teams.

An important factor was the fact that we had the Crystal Garden to train in (a fifty-yard pool). It is due to be torn down and this is an ideal plan to replace it. It can also become a marvelous place for family recreation and a vital health factor to everyone of any age.

Through the kindness of the late Mr. McPherson this is possible and should be a suitable memorial to a very fine philanthropic gentleman.

Let's stop quibbling and get on with the job immediately. — Archie McKinnon, 1445 Brooke.

Seek It Out

The feature article by the Hon. John Munro, Minister of Health and Welfare in the Times Weekend Magazine, commending physical exercise outdoors, was very timely, coming on the heels of Victoria's "March for Millions." No part of Canada is more conducive to all-year outdoor activity than Victoria.

Few of us know our capacity until we try. This, the "March for Millions" walkers well know. As Mr. Munro concluded in his article: "It is worth remembering that the maximum use of our personal potential does not come to us. We have to seek it out. The choice is ours."

The Outdoor Club of Victoria organizes hikes almost weekly throughout the year in this area. If interested, join us on Sunday, November 23, for a hike from the Y.M.C.A. camp at Glinz Lake to Ragged Mountain, or on December 7 in the Metchosin District.

Bring a lunch, rain gear, a stout pair of shoes and wool socks preferably. We meet north of the Hudson's Bay Company on Herald Street at 9:45 a.m. Our ages are from seven to seventy-seven and older. — W. H. Warren, Chairman, Outings Committee, Outdoor Club of Victoria.

Sisterly Advice

As a business man from your sister city, Palm Springs, I would like to offer some well meaning advice to the city council. You have a central swimming pool that we would be proud of, I believe it's called the Crystal Pool. It is totally in keeping with the character of the surrounding area, and is one of the reasons that we Californians come to this city, what with the waxworks and all.

What you need is some American know-how to put the place back on its feet. Spend some money on it and put some shops into it. Believe you me we would sure appreciate a place like it, but we have managed to destroy all our interesting old places, and are only now beginning to regret it. Hell, anybody can build a modern pool, by the lowest bidder yet. In two years it will fall apart, civic monument or not.

One thing we noticed was that mess of rubble by the Crystal place. Couldn't understand it in such a beautiful place, reminded us of home. — Future Canadians, John and Edna Phillips, 60 Panorama Drive, Palm Springs.

DENNIS THE MENACE

Looking Back

From the Times of Nov. 19, 1909

The residents of Oak Bay are being pestered by coons. The furry fellows who provide winter clothing for people in the land of blizzards have invaded the chicken houses of residents and, just recently, one of them indulged in a turkey at the expense of Johnny Bowker. Less than an hour later Mr. Bowker had the pelt of that coon and news of the hunt sent others into the bush.

More Taxes Less Growth

The Globe and Mail

How would the tax changes proposed by the White Paper affect small businesses? Essentially they would take from the small businessman a tax savings and a tax deferral that have always been denied to the taxpayer who made his income from wages or salary.

At present the corporate rates of taxation — apart from the 3 per cent surtax which ends in 1970 — are 21 per cent on the first $35,000 of annual income and 50 per cent on the excess. For the small businessman the 21 per cent has become the effective ceiling rate on his personal income, though he might in fact enjoy the use of an income that would subject him to a higher rate if it were all taxed at the time it was earned.

The White Paper points out that, because of the low rate, a taxpayer whose business can be incorporated can earn up to $40,000 at marginal rates of 21 per cent or less. A taxpayer who cannot incorporate his source of income, on the other hand, can earn only $5,000 before his marginal rate exceeds 21 per cent.

★ ★ ★

The incorporated taxpayer can charge many of his living expenses — such as a car, entertainment, even at times a house — to his business. Beyond that he will usually take out of the business as personal income only such amounts as will not put him into a bracket above 21 per cent. The rest of his earnings he leaves in his business. Earnings thus left for 10 or 20 years, and escaping taxation for such periods of time, in fact escape some taxation altogether. Taxation deferred, like justice, can be taxation denied.

This first effect of the split-rate system is probably, however, the least important. The trouble is that bright businessmen (and their lawyers and accountants) have worked to pervert it.

Many, for instance, were not content with one $35,000 profit at the low 21 per cent rate. They divided their affairs into several businesses and claimed the low rate on each. The government has tried to stay ahead of such ploys, and never managed it. It has closed off one means of tax evasion, only to find another opened under its feet.

★ ★ ★

That tax evasion of all sorts has been very extensive is borne out by the White Paper figures. Reducing the top personal rate of 80 per cent to around 50 per cent will cost the government only $40-million in revenue. Quite evidently all kinds of individuals and businesses have been getting away with murder.

Under the White Paper proposals, the 21 per cent rate will be ended. All corporations will pay the 50 per cent rate.

At one stroke the infinite possibilities for tax evasion which existed under the split rate will be done away with. The small businessman will be placed on the same basis as the wage or salary earner.

He will be paying a larger share of taxes than he paid before, but it will be the same share that is paid by employed individuals.

As this advances the principle of equity, it is good; but there will be one major defect so far as the economy is concerned.

The 21 per cent rate persuaded small and new businesses to plough much of their earnings back into the business. By taxing them at a concessionary rate it provided them with an internal source of expansion capital. It also permitted them to defer the payment of tax at a level higher than 21 per cent until they took earnings into personal income, which might be for many years. This provided a second source of capital.

Now the small businessman will have to pay 50 per cent on all his profits. If he takes them into income he will almost certainly be paying at a rate higher than 21 per cent. Either way he will have less capital to develop his business. The small business, moreover, has always been at a disadvantage in the market place; it has always been less able than large business to borrow for expansion.

The proposals of the White Paper will make it much more difficult for a man with bright ideas to start and build a business.

This could be a loss to the country. Take Clairtone, for example. It started small and eventually ran into difficulty; but along the way it proved that there was a market for quality products which large business had not perceived. Large business eventually moved in to take advantage of this market, and Canadians — and buyers abroad — were provided with a wider range of choice. All because one small business had a bright idea and acted upon it.

Canadians cannot know how much of their productivity and prosperity has depended upon creative men who started small, with the aid of the low 21 per cent rate, and eventually grew big and forced their competitors to grow also, and thereby provided wealth and jobs all round.

Killing the 21 per cent rate will kill some of these small golden geese. We will be purchasing equity; we will be removing a major source of tax evasion. But there will be a price to be paid.

Language bill protest

LETTER FROM QUEBEC CITY

Language Last Remnant of French Canada Culture

Protests over the Quebec government's new languages bill have marked an acceleration in the seemingly endless crises that have confronted the province this fall.

By PAUL WILLIAMSON

For the first time in several months, the manifestation of the crises has shifted from Montreal to Quebec City. Not since the teachers' protest last spring has this city been the centre of large scale demonstrations.

Williamson

The recent rally in front of the legislative buildings, in opposition to Bill 63, was not as large as expected, but it affected far more Quebecois than those present for the event.

Certainly the rally had wide ranging effects. It involved both English speaking and French speaking residents. It moved even the most complacent of citizens — and French-Canadians are like most other Canadians generally apathetic—to consider their position on the issue of Bill 63.

Why has the question moved into so many usually unconcerned homes?

One factor has been the attitude of the provincial teachers' union. In the days prior to the October 31 rally in Quebec City, teachers in schools across the province received telegrams from union leaders urging them to "sensitize" the students to the implications of the language bill.

The result was that many teachers led pupils on a sort of children's crusade in the streets. In the suburb of Ste. Foy, three days before the rally, streams of 12 and 13-year-olds, led by their teachers and often escorted by police, could be seen marching toward Laval University and "sensitizing" meetings.

Early on the morning of October 30, dozens of school buses disgorged pupils in the area of the university. The children carried signs and flags, including the French tricolor, and could be seen knocking over English language signs apparently in full view of teachers and police.

It is absurd, or course, to pretend that these young children understood the implications of their actions. And ore wonders how they will react in four or five years when they disagree with authorities.

What sort of action will they opt for? And will they not be quick to point out where they learned such tactics?

Many families who could not have normally been involved in such political questions found that their children were extremely involved. The issue, then, was literally brought home.

English families in the area also found themselves involved. On the night before the rally, English language schools in the city were the scene of numerous faculty meetings where the question of closing the schools for the following day was debated.

★

One aspect of these meetings was something almost inconceivable to a citizen of Victoria — fear. Those who argued that the schools should be closed reported rumors were circulating that extremist "guerrilla" forces were considering occupying English language schools.

And as the phenomenon of "backlash" seems to operate more quickly among young teen-agers than adults, there was concern that the pupils of the English language schools would resist such occupation, leading to violence.

It was even suggested that French-Canadian police could not be counted upon to hurry to the rescue of English language institutions. And the widespread reporting of a statement supposedly made by a union leader that if the bill passed there would be bombs in the English shools hardly lessened the tension.

Opponents to the closing of the schools argued that to do so would be to give in to the extremists and demonstrate that their methods were indeed effective.

The first group prevailed, and the English language schools closed for the day.

The schools, however, were left alone and the rally itself was relatively passive. The only violence occurred after the manifestation was over and the majority of the demonstrators had left.

But in assessing their fears of the previous hours, many Quebecois realized how close they had come to chaos.

Why all the fuss over Bill 63? Of its three principal provisions, only one is really new. This is the section authorizing the Minister of Immigration to provide the necessary facilities for immigrants to the province to acquire a thorough knowledge of French.

That parents have the right to have children educated in the language of their choice, and that pupils in English language schools must also learn French, are not really new ideas. There have always been English language schools in the province and pupils in them have always studied French.

Supporters of the Front de Quebec Francais argue that to guarantee the right of choice of language instruction preserves the English language and increases the threat to French.

They fear that many French-Canadian parents, with their eyes on the child's future in business, will send their French-speaking children to English language schools. Immigrants, even if they first acquire a knowledge of French, will also turn to English.

There can be no "equality" for English in Quebec. Equality for English means the eventual domination of the majority language by the minority language.

Whether these arguments are correct is questionable, but it is certain the bill has provided a rallying point for French-Canadians who fear that their culture is slipping into the morass of North Americanism.

There are observers who suggest that French-Canadian culture has been boiled down and now nothing is left but the language.

★

The other symbols of French Canada's unique society have crumbled. The Church has lost its dominant position. The classical education system, in an apparent attempt at modernization, has deteriorated to a state of complete confusion. The political parties are in a state of disarray.

And perhaps most important of all, the Quebecois have opted for the North American life style in all respects except language. This gives the language issue an inflated importance.

The tragedy of the current confusion is that French-Canadian society is losing the fight against assimilation and Bill 63 can only hasten this end. It will speed the process by dividing the members of the group it is supposedly designed to protect.

French-Canadians find themselves ranged in two camps, each of which believes it has the solution which can best prolong the survival of French Canada.

One side, supporting Bill 63, argues that Quebec must accept certain intrusions from the rest of North America if it is to be economically healthy enough to survive in the midst of two hundred million Anglo-Saxons.

The second side believes the only way to survive is to put up the linguistic walls and focus everyone — investors, immigrants, and often the French-Canadians themselves — to speak French.

And this inner conflict is assuming such proportions that it, and not the external threat of assimilation, may destroy French Canada.

George III Is Alive and in Washington

By PAUL JOHNSON
New Statesman

So Richard Nixon will continue the Vietnam conflict. He is reported to have said he will not be "The First American president to lose a war."

The remark is a chilling reminder of the level at which the world's most powerful executive thinks. There is a schoolboy ring about it.

Politicians should always avoid absolute statements, which are certain to be swiftly falsified by events. Mr. Churchill did not "become Prime Minister to preside over the dissolution of the British empire"; but that dissolution proceeded as steadily under his administration as under Mr. Atlee's.

A Tory minister, whose name few people could now recall, promised that Britain would "never" surrender sovereighty over Cyprus; in no time at all Archbishop Makarios was smiling benignly from Government House.

Political leaders should resist the temptation to see themselves in historical perspective, which they are sure to misjudge. Mr. Nixon, at the rate he is going, is likely to be condemned by history for matters quite unrelated to the Vietnam War, which in any event is not "his" war at all; it was General Eisenhower who first involved America in Vietnam; Mr. Kennedy who undertook a military commitment there, and Mr. Johnson who gambled America's prestige on a victory.

Winds of History

If Mr. Nixon were to end the war, on whatever terms he could get, it is probable he would earn the approval of historians, rather than their censure.

For the first quality of statesmanship is surely the enlightened recognition of national interest. In comparison with this, victory or defeat, prestige or humiliation, are mere words, to be blown away like autumn leaves by the winds of history.

Let Mr. Nixon ask himself two simple questions: would his country's security and independence be increased by a victory in Vietnam? Would they be diminished by withdrawal?

The answer in both cases is no. The stigma of defeat is self-imposed by American official rhetoric.

Far more damaging to America is the evidence of political and military miscalculation which the whole course of her involvement supplies, and by the irresolution which Mr. Nixon shows even at this late hour.

America's ability to influence the world is likely to be strengthened by her recognition, however belated, of the facts of life in South East Asia.

Nations achieve maturity not by military prowess but by forbearance, for it is rightly recognized as a sign of self-confidence.

Mr. Atlee's decision to give India her independence, which brought him "patriotic" abuse at the time, is now universally recognized as an act of wisdom.

Which Frenchman in his senses would now criticise Mendes-France for withdrawing from Indo-China, or de Gaulle for conceding liberty to the Algerians?

Curious Parallels

The refusal of many Americans to accept the inevitable in Vietnam comes oddly from a people who owe their very existence, as a nation, to Britain's recognition in 1783 that military victory and national self-interest are not always synonymous and may be mutually incompatible.

There are some curious and illuminating parallels between the Vietnam War and the War of Independence.

In both cases the imperial power justified the use of force to deny national independence not in a local, but in a global context.

Today the Americans see a communist victory in Vietnam as significant, not in itself, but as part of a continuous erosive process which will ultimately engulf the entire "Free World." Vietnam alone, they say, is not worth a war, but where will it all end?"

It is interesting that George III also had his domino theory, which he outlined in a letter to Lord North on 11 June, 1779.

It evokes many echoes of White House pronouncements on Vietnam; indeed, suitably updated and translated into the sham-Lincolnian prose so beloved of Washington scriptwriters it could have been delivered by Mr. Nixon himself.

Rituals of Hawks

The letter has all the familiar characteristics of the hawk; professions of a peaceful disposition; ritual denunciation of war; willingness to negotiate about everything except the substance; claims to reasonableness as contrasted with utter intransigence of one's opponents the Americans actually had the nerve to want independence!; absence of any sense of proportion the war was "the most serious in which any country was ever engaged"; Prophesies of cosmic doom unless military victory is secured (Governor Reagan, I see, believes defeat in Vietnam could lead to "a thousand years of darkness for unborn generations"); and finally the use of the term "firmness" as a euphemism for escalation.

It is interesting to note, too, that King George, like many U.S. hawks today, stressed the very size and power of his country as an additional reason for not conceding defeat.

In another letter he writes that he "could never suppose this country so far lost to all ideas of self-importance" as to grant America independence, for then it would "fall into a very low class among the European states."

Or, as he put it again, "The giving up the game would be total ruin, a small state may certainly subsist but a great mouldering one cannot get into an inferior situation but must be annihilated."

Depressingly little has changed in imperial delusions over the past two centuries. George III is alive and well, and living in Washington.

The same forces which are now driving America to peace operated in late-18th-century Britain: the growth of a responsible opposition to the war and the evident popularity of a peace policy among the electorate; a recognition that the cost was intolerable; above all, a realization that, even if technical military victory were secured, vast forces would be required indefinitely to hold down a hostile population.

Will Seem Baffling

King George was forced to yield by political and economic as much as by military facts. Yet once American independence was conceded, all the hawkish predictions were soon seen to be wholly unfounded.

I suspect that, in a comparatively short time, people will find the blind intransigence of American policy-makers in Vietnam as baffling and incomprehensible as the obstinacy of old King George.

He thought he was fighting the Americans in the name of commerce; in fact, by doing so, he was impeding its development.

The U.S. hawks think they are fighting the Vietnamese to halt the spread of communism in Asia; even today, most sensible people have a shrewd suspicion that America's actions, if anything, are giving communism a helping hand: what is likely to be the judgment in 10 or 20 years' time?

The truth is that the ostensible justifications for war are nearly always the rationalization of egregious folly.

The Tomorrow That So Many Worried About Yesterday

By ART STOTT

When Prof. Frederick Edell spoke to the University Extension Association Monday night on "The University Ferment"—a title he varied slightly because it sounded to him too much like making home-brew in the basement—he presented several facets of the problem and frankly confessed his inability to find answers. The admission was realistic. Few of the answers I've heard are convincing. Maybe there aren't any.

Stott

He discussed familiar themes—the emergence of the current young generation into an entirely new environment initiated by the atomic bomb and left impermanent by it; the rejection of old values tied to previous times when a succeeding generation could expect the life ahead to be modified only slightly from the life of the generation before it; social and human failure represented by the Vietnam war and other wars, by racial clashes, by greed and the acquisition of things which left a vast hunger for inspiration of the spirit; pollution in all forms; over-population; the generation gap; the dissatisfaction of students with the form of education they were receiving; the dehumanizing experiences of large universities with specialization compartmentalizing teachers and the taught and preventing the communion of scholars the whole bit.

★ ★ ★

To me, the address served a highly valuable purpose in disturbing some of our more comfortable assumptions and concepts which I think was the intent of Prof. Edell.

From his talk and later conversation with him, I came away with a sense of social weightlessness. As I interpreted his picture of the scene—forgive the barbarism—it was difficult to tell up from down.

I am impressed by the change of environment. I'm forced to believe the unbelievable that man has walked on the moon and will probably walk elsewhere in the firmament. I believe that two major powers have weapons which could kill every individual on the earth, not once but several times over. I recognize the savagery of war, conventional or otherwise, the shocking ascendancy of violence. I know that a man can be rich as Croesus and spiritually bankrupt. I recognize the almost universal trend to seek escape from reality in an effective narcotic which may be spiritual or chemical.

So what do we do about it? I'm optimistic enough to think that we do the best we can with the things we have at hand. I believe parents will continue, in the main, to give to their children the affection which predates recorded history and has continued through gigantic catastrophes of the past. I believe that most of them will anticipate rebellion in youth as the children reach adolescence. When both decide to bridge the generation gap, I think it will be bridged.

As far as hazards to universal survival are concerned, I take a narrowly personal and negative view. Humanity has escaped such threats before. It may not in the future. But I don't expect to be around when it happens. And when I'm gone, very selfishly, I don't expect to worry about it.

In education, I think hard practicalities will supersede theory, enlightened or merely faddish. As the graphs are going nowadays, we just won't be able to finance all that we'd like to do or what those who are young and others who are yet unborn would like to have done for them. We could be heading back to the policy of educating the elite—which isn't a pleasing thought.

But, foreboding as the future may be, it seems to me that the harassed old world can still offer inducements to living and enjoyment. Friendship, compassion, generosity, affection still exist. A small child can still grasp your hand, walking, in trust. A boy can still fish, whether he catches anything or not. Books, old and new, can still light a candle for a reader. Music, according to individual taste, can still provide its satisfactions. Sunrise and sunset still paint the sky, the sea and the mountains. Nature performs its miracles in the slow rolling of the seasons. Uncounted human contacts are not bleak, cruel, insensitive.

★ ★ ★

So I'm told that the old values are obsolete, that the new are still awaiting proof. I'm told that if I don't worry, I just don't understand the problem. The inference is that I can't understand it because for the better part of my life I was not confronted by ultimate doom under the umbrella of a mushroom cloud, or the scum of pollution. The rejection of the old by some of the young has been explained to me ad infinitum. I hope I'll continue to listen and that listening, I won't react by rejecting the young.

And I hope I remember an old philosophy that today, which is tolerable and as pleasant as I and my friends make it, is the tomorrow which so many people worried about yesterday.

Tax Advantages Spark Many Mergers in U.S.

By JAN NUGENT

WASHINGTON (WP) — It has become part of U.S. economic folklore to attribute the growth by merger of today's huge industrial complexes, commonly known as conglomerates, to three factors.

Economies inherent in bigness, necessity for improved, centralized management, and the research advantages of a huge complex—these are the customary reasons named.

Now there is growing concern that other developments—perhaps more important and certainly less understood—may be propelling the current merger boom.

Antitrust subcommittees on both sides of the capitol are approaching the issue from different angles.

A House antitrust subcommittee, in recent hearings, developed testimony that indicated large banks may have stimulated the rush to corporate mergers by making funds available to companies for acquisition purposes in order to corral the deposits of the combined firm.

A Senate antitrust panel heard a government report that contended present tax and accounting methods, coupled with stock market speculation, have pushed the merger curve upward.

MERGERS SUBSIDIZED

Tax laws actually "subsidize" mergers, while tax accounting methods permit merger-prone corporations to glamorize their profit performance and exploit speculative behavior in the stock market, the study said.

The report was a federal trade commission staff study, which arrived at capitol hill with a disclaimer from the commission included. The five commissioners disagreed over the controversial report's conclusions. Commissioner Mary Gardiner Jones openly criticized the study as biased.

Willard Mueller, who wrote the report while he was FTC's chief economist, summarized its findings for the Senate subcommittee.

The largest 200 manufacturing corporations had increased their share of total U.S. manufacturing assets to 60 per cent by the end of 1968—largely because of their merger activity, the report said.

The behemoth corporations were also the most active acquirers and they did not purchase "loser" companies, according to the FTC data.

SHARP CRITICISM

Although anti-trust enforcement was criticized sharply, the report spent an entire chapter reviewing present "institutional arrangements" which have fueled the acquisition fever.

The report contends much of the spectacular earnings gains and subsequent investor enthusiasm generated by conglomerate firms were produced by extremely liberal accounting methods used to calculate their dramatic merger campaigns.

(Recently, the mystique surrounding conglomerate firms has diminished, as many experienced stock price declines.)

"Generally accepted accounting principles permit a range of reporting choices that can materially alter reported company operating results," the study says. It also reports "two celebrated instances," in which firms supposedly using accepted accounting methods indicated favorable profits up to the point of bankruptcy.

The report saved some of its sharpest fire for tax treatment accorded mergers. Under present law, mergers qualify as corporate reorganizations in which no capital gains tax must be paid.

"In an overwhelming majority of cases," large mergers have been accorded tax-free treatment, the report says.

In 1968 alone, uncollected taxes on capital gains arising from mergers amounted to "at least" several hundred million dollars and may have been nearer $1 billion, according to the study.

Unlike the sale of most business assets—if not ordinary income—the sale of large corporations has been tax exempt 85 per cent of the time, the FTC staff reported.

Alberta Board Approves Additional Gas Export

CALGARY (CP) — The Alberta Oil and Gas Conservation Board announced Tuesday that it is prepared to allow TransCanada Pipelines Ltd. to export an additional 2,200,000,000,000 cubic feet of natural gas from the province.

The decision, which is subject to provincial cabinet approval, would allow TransCanada to remove 21,400,000,000,000 cubic feet of gas from the province over a period extending to Oct. 31, 1994.

The decision was the first on an application to remove gas from the province since the board last month revised its policies and procedures used in assesing such applications.

The board estimated that remaining established reserves of marketable gas in the province were about 44,300,000,000,000 cubic feet at May 31, 1969, of which some 38,800,000,000,000, were currently contractable reserves.

NEW FORMULA

Using the new formula, the board recommended as future reserves 11,700,000,000,000 cubic feet of gas not yet discovered or developed. This represented 4.5 years growth of reserves at the rate of 2,600,000,000,000 cubic feet a year, the average growth rate experienced over the most recent 10-year period.

The board estimated that Alberta requirements for the 30-year period June 1, 1969 to May 31, 1999, at some 15,700,000,000,000 cubic feet.

It estimated that if the TransCanada application were approved, a contractable surplus of 2,100,000,000,000 cubic feet and a future surplus of 6,700,000,000,000 would remain after deducting the 30-year requirements of the province, the 30-year peak requirements of the province and existing export commitments.

It was not known what effect the board's decision would have on a move by a Nebraska-based distributor to obtain gas supplies from Alberta.

Northern Natural Gas Co. of Omaha, through it's Canadian affiliate Consolidated Natural Gas Ltd. of Calgary, has applied for permission to remove 3,300,000,000,000 cubic feet of gas from Alberta over a 25-year period starting in 1971.

At a hearing into the Northern Natural application in July, TransCanada told the board that there was no gas in the province for the American newcomer.

TransCanada estimated that Alberta's gas surplus would grow to 5,600,000,000,000 cubic feet during the next 10 years, but said existing pipeline companies already had markets with demands in excess of this figure.

Until other sources were found, said TransCanada President Vern Horte, a new application of the magnitude of Northern's should be shelved.

Northern would move the gas to customers in the U.S. midwest through an 800-mile-long pipeline it planned to build from Empress, on the Alberta-Saskatchewan border directly east of Calgary, to North Branch, Minn.

Price Increases In 1970 Forecast

TORONTO (CP) — Almost 60 per cent of a group of sales and marketing executives from companies across Canada say prices of their products will go up next year.

The executuves made the forecast in a survey of 428 Canadain firms, mainly manufacturing companies, conducted by Sales and Marketing Executives — International, and Manpower Services Ltd., a private Canadian employment service.

Sales and Marketing Executives-International is a worldwide society of sales executives, with a Canadian branch.

Asked whether they expect price increases next year, 59 per cent of those surveyed, or 253, replied, "yes."

Of those, about 52 per cent expect the increase to range between one and five per cent. About 35 per cent expect prices to go up between five and 10 per cent, while 4.4 per cent expect an increase of between 10 and 25 per cent.

Only seven of the 428 executives expect prices to go down next year, while 32 per cent or 138 expect them to remain the same. The remainder gave no answer.

SALES WILL RISE

Most of the sales executives also say price increases will be accompanied by new or improved products.

Only 15 per cent expect no improvement in products or services in 1970.

Nearly all the executives — 89 per cent — expect sales to rise next year, by anywhere between five to 15 per cent in most cases. Fifty-three per cent expect profits to rise as well.

For the first six months of 1969, the executives reported that sales generally were up from the similar period a year before.

Nearly 79 per cent found they had increased, and of these, 13 per cent said they were at least 30 per cent better than a year earlier.

Only nine per cent said sales were lower, while 10 per cent reported them at the same level at the previous year.

U.S. Releases Cobalt Reserve

NEW YORK (AP) — The nickel shortage may be alleviated by a United States government decision to release 6,400,000 pounds of cobalt from the government reserves.

Cobalt can be substituted for nickel, now in short supply, in some cases. The government recently released some nickel to help the shortage due to a 128-day work stoppage at the International Nickel Co. of Canada Ltd. which ended Friday.

Cobalt can be used, half and half, with nickel as a substitute for electroplating with pure nickel. It also can be used instead of nickel in some types of stainless steel. However the government release will not be able to compensate completely for the present nickel shortage.

COPPER PASS MINES LTD.
Plan Nickel Ore Shipments
Now Listed on the Calgary Exchange

Heavy equipment has been moved onto the property of Copper Pass Mines in preparation for production from its claims on Great Slave Lake, some 80 miles east of Yellowknife, N.W.T. It plans to mine niccolite for bagging and shipment and has been informed by its ore agents, Aumas, Fergusson, Wild, that a market has been secured for the production of the mine.

The ore, which has been taken mainly from the most easterly of seven veins opened, grades between 27% and 37% nickel, with cobalt, bismuth and arsenic present (N.M., Aug. 7). The company hopes to ship the first 1,000 tons mined by the end of January. It has recently completed an underwriting of treasury shares which yielded it $85,000. A good portion of the money realized will be spent on its claims.

No Place to Frolic On New Year's Eve

By JIM HUME

They hired the band for New Year's Eve—then found it had nowhere to play.

That was the complaint of the Italian Assistance Centre to the Victoria city recreation and community services committee Monday.

In August the IAC applied for the use of the Crystal Garden for a New Year's Eve dance.

Representatives were told that while the Garden hadn't been booked at that time, it couldn't be booked by the IAC until a $50 bill for past services had been paid.

A month later the Italian group applied again for the Crystal, this time in writing and with the added weight of the line "the orchestra was hired in August."

They got the same answer. "Pay your old bill and we'll consider your application, but not until."

PAID BILL

In late October the IAC paid the $50.

But by that time two other applicants for the Crystal had come along: the Lion's Club and a private promoter who has operated New Year's Eve dances at the Crystal for the last five years.

A committee comprised of chairman Ald. Percy Frampton, city manager Dennis Young and director of community services Jack Morgan, decided to rent the Crystal to the private operator they had rented to five years in a row.

The Lion's Club accepted the decision. The Italian Assistance Centre charged discrimination and asked for compensation for the orchestra they had hired in August.

Monday the full recreation and community services committee endorsed the action of the sub-committee and refused payment of "reimbursement for our commitment to our orchestra which had to be paid after we cancelled our dance."

NO COMPENSATION

The committee also declined to discuss "compensation for our wasted work in organizing the dance."

That wasn't the end of the Crystal's comic opera.

On the same committee agenda was a request from J. A. Carmichael, the private dance organizer, seeking compensation for $550 he claims to have lost on last New Year's Eve dance.

Carmichael, who has the Crystal for this New Year as he has for the past several years, ran into snow trouble last Hogmanay.

Between Christmas and Dec. 29 the Crystal was closed in the interests of public safety because of heavy snow on the roof.

Late Dec. 29 the snow was melting fast and engineers thought there was a chance the famous dance spot could re-open.

Further heavy snow on the night of Dec. 29 and Dec. 30 made re-opening impossible. The Garden was closed, the dance cancelled.

FOOD BILL

That left Carmichael with a hefty food bill he claimed the city should pay because, he said, it had failed to state definitely prior to Dec. 30 that the Crystal would remain closed.

Mayor Hugh Stephen said he thought Carmichael had a moral point.

The rest of the committee, Ald. Harold Olafson, Ald. Cecil Parrot, Hugh Ramsay and Sandy Smith didn't.

They felt it was the breaks of the dance promotion game and that a four-day closure prior to New Year's Eve was ample warning that troubles could occur.

Carmichael's bid for $550 for compensation for the food he had to pay for was lost 5-1 with chairman Frampton joining the vote against the mayor.

Theatres Ignore Red Ban

PARIS (AP) — A controversial Soviet film — the first Russian production to contain a nude scene—went on show in four Paris cinemas Tuesday night despite the Kremlin's attempts to prevent its distribution.

A French company bought the rights to Andrei Rublyov, directed by Andrei Tarkovsky, from the Soviet film agency Sovexportfilm.

It announced last Saturday that "the Soviet government has informed us that it will oppose by all means" the presentation of the film, which was hailed as a masterpiece at this year's Cannes film festival and described by some critics as comparable with works of the great Soviet director, Sergei Eisenstein.

The film, on the life of Russia's most famous ikon painter, a 15th Century monk, has been criticized by the Soviet press as containing excessive cruelty and vulgarity.

'Retired' Bureau

An organizational meeting of Victoria Chamber of Commerce retired executives bureau will be held in the chamber board room Tuesday at 2.30 p.m.

The group has been called together for general discussion on the subject of senior executive expertise as a potential force for community betterment.

Mrs. Young studied at the famous Eastman School of Music, University of Rochester, from which she obtained her MA in musical literature and voice, and subsequently studied abroad for three years, in London and Zurich. She is the wife of Philip Young, head of Uvic's music division. Her program consists of songs by Mozart, Purcell, Samuel Barber, Berlioz and Brahms.

Charges Now Formal Against Nureyev

MILAN (Reuters) — An Italian ballerina has formally accused Russian dancer Rudolf Nureyev of boxing her ears in the middle of a performance of the ballet Giselle.

Lawyers for Giovanna Lisa Mariana, 28, of the La Scala Ballet Co., filed charges against Nureyev on Tuesday for inflicting blows, injuries and insults on her during the performance in Trieste on Nov. 6.

Conviction on the charges carries a maximum penalty of four years and two months in prison.

The lawyers alleged that during a difficult passage in the ballet, Miss Mariana inadvertently touched Nureyev's foot and he promptly slapped her on stage in front of the audience. Enclosing a doctor's certificate to support the charges, the lawyers complained of "a most serious affront to her personal dignity and that of the entire ballet corps of La Scala Theatre."

Miss Mariana cited all her colleagues and three La Scala officials as witnesses in the case, which will be passed to justice authorities in Trieste for possible action.

The charges filed are all penal offences and so far no claim for damages has been made. In Italy that usually comes after a conviction.

When Agnew Charged 'Bias' The Industry Cried 'Foul'

By RICHARD HARWOOD AND LAURENCE STERN
The Washington Post

When vice-president Spiro Agnew unloaded last week on the alleged biases of the "tiny and closed fraternity of privileged men" in the television news business, cries of foul were heard throughout the land.

That often happens when public figures attack the media, probably because there is a theory in the industry that people shouldn't bite back at their dogs.

●

In Agnew's case it has been charged that he seeks to erode "freedom of the press," that he is trying to muzzle the administration's critics, that he is subliminally blackmailing a $3 billion industry with a reminder that TV licences are given and taken away by a Federal Communications Commission whose members are appointed by the president. There is even talk about a new era of McCarthyism.

●

"My feeling," an overwrought CBS commentator told Newsweek, "is that the White House is out to get all of us, all the Liberals in all the media . . . we're in for some dangerous times."

Perhaps.

But the issue of media performance is not going to evaporate in the U.S. simply because publishers and network presidents wrap themselves in the first amendment and sneer at Spiro Agnew.

●

For the facts are that the media are as blemished as any other institution in this society and that there is growing public concern over their performance.

This is reflected in the spectacular proliferation of underground newspapers whose constitutents are young radicals and drop-outs turned off by the establishment press.

It is reflected in the creation (with private and public funds) of a vast network of "educational" television stations offering an alternative to whatever it is that the commercial networks happen to be selling.

In Chicago, reporters and editors think so little of their daily product that they produce each month a journalism review cataloguing the sins and omissions of the newspapers that employ them. The Columbia Journalism Review attempts the same thing on a broader scale.

●

Politicians from Dwight Eisenhower to George Wallace to Eugene McCarthy have raged at the Eastern Liberal Press. Newton Minow, a former chairman of the Federal Communications Commission, and Nicholas Johnson, a present member of the commission, made their reputations assaulting the TV "wasteland" to the cheers of many of the same editorial writers and critics who are now shocked at Agnew's gall.

●

Indeed, Johnson has been one of the principal advocates of community pressure groups that are trying, in Agnew's phrase, to make television stations more "responsive" to public desires in programming.

If successful, these efforts will lead to the transfer of television licences in various cities—Jackson, Miss., New York and Washington, for example—from "conservative" to "liberal" owners and managers.

●

One of the reasons for all this agitation is that people have come to recognize that the selection and presentation of "news" is a very unscientific enterprise.

Except for a few platitudes about "objectivity," "responsibility," and "news that's fit to print," there are no accepted or enforceable standards in this business.

"News" is what the media say it is and the definition varies from day to day and place to place. It was "news" in the Washington Post and The New York Times last week when three doves in the Senate announced support for the anti-war demonstrations of Nov. 15.

●

It was not "news" at all in The Times the following day when 359 Congressmen endorsed the president's negotiating posture on the Vietnam war.

In some parts of the country last week, people were told that Washington was braced for war against the howling mobs in the city. Elsewhere they read about love and singing and picnics on the public lawns.

There is no conspiracy in any of this, despite Spiro Agnew's dark suspicions. But there is much room for criticism, debate and discussion.

And that debate and discusion need not be limited—should not be limited—to the dreary convention halls of the broadcasters and editors.

●

In a free society, the public—including public office holders—has the biggest stake in "news" and information and its views need to be heard.

There is always going to be heat in the kitchen. If networks and newspapers can't take it, they're in worse shape than they seem.

Better Manpower Use Said Answer to Soaring Health Costs

OTTAWA (CP) — More efficient use of manpower and facilities is the best way to limit the rising costs of health care, says Federal Health Minister John Munro.

He will have an opportunity Nov. 25 and 26 of trying to convince his provincial government counterparts, who assemble here to examine reports of seven costs studies they established a year ago.

Seventy per cent of the current cost of health services represents salaries, wages and fees. But Mr. Munro has said he believes cost cutting should avoid making savings at the expense of health care personnel.

In the field of manpower use he sees plenty of evidence that savings can be made. A three-day conference here last month of top health care professionals added their voices to evidence of this turned up by the federal-provincial studies.

In a recent speech, Mr. Munro argued that modern resources of cost efficiency and manpower utilization have not been brought fully to bear in the health care system.

Similar viewpoints were expressed at the October manpower conference, including criticism by one study group chairman, Dr. J. D. Wallace of Toronto General Hospital, of administrators and educationists for failing to see evidence of poor management practices as the cause of uncontrolled costs.

Mr. Munro is critical of practices such as nurses being used for multiple duties that have no real relationship to their training in care of the sick. A nurse employed in the field where she can spot illness and problems before they become serious could reduce the pressure on hospital beds and expensive treatment.

He sounded a note of urgency by saying he wants "to come to grips with this problem before adverse popular reaction forces us to slash health costs and impair our services."

The magnitude of the problem he illustrated by forecasting total costs within three years of $6,200,000,000 compared with $3,700,000,000 in 1967 and $1,700,000,000 in 1957.

Kiwanis Villa Worthy Project For Support

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Go quietly into Kiwanis Villa on Cook Street, as I did one afternoon recently. Visit friends, as I do from time to time, in any one of the units that make up the Kiwanis housekeeping complex on the same property or on Cedar Hill Crossroad.

Forbes

You'll immediately discover, if you don't already know, that here is a mammoth project, geared to give elderly people who qualify, comfortable living quarters at minimum rental costs.

The Villa houses 79 residents, couples and singles, all ambulatory but no longer able to keep house or cook meals. Each one has a comfortable furnished room.

★ ★ ★

There are lounges for television, music, games, reading and talking, a crafts room for hobbies and a large dining room gay in its decorations of orange, red and black. There's also a modern kitchen and several large patio gardens where some of the residents continue to grow flowers.

This phase of the Kiwanis housing project was opened in 1961 with accommodation for 55 and with temporary dining quarters. Four years later, in 1965, another 24 rooms and the present dining room and kitchen were added.

Today a staff of 17 including a matron and an assistnat matron, maintain a smooth-functioning establishment that since it opened has cared for a total of 203 men and women.

The housekeeping units are maintained as an entirely separate function. First six of these were opened for elderly couples on July 1, 1953, at Hibberson Crescent on Cedar Hill Road.

★ ★ ★

Victoria Kiwanis Club, project sponsors, found the need for this type of housing so great they made immediate plans to increase the accommodation.

In 1954-55 a further 42 units were opened on the crescent, and 12 more in 1959-60 on club-owned property on Cook Street.

By then it was discovered that some of the couples who had moved in originally were now reduced, through death, to singles.

"So we began to make a careful study of the housing needs of survivors for whom we had a certain obligation," Glenn Hope, administrator of the housing units, explains.

Result was a two-stage decision, to build the Villa for those who needed room and board and then a number of units for single occupancy, all on the Cook Street property.

★ ★ ★

First of the single units, comprising bed-sitting room, kitchenette and bathroom were completed and occupied this autumn. Each one is modern in in appointments and has its own small garden.

Some of these singles were immediately filled by survivors from the larger units, leaving them free to again house couples. Others were given to single women.

Decision as to those who occupy Kiwanis Village units is made on a points system, Hope told me. Main qualifications include length of time in Victoria or British Columbia and and then the need of the applicant.

A committee of Kiwanis members makes the final choice. Applications that go before this committee are numbered and not named.

Cost of building the present group of single units, Glenn Hope says, amounted to approximately $220,000 subscribed in part through an annual Kiwanis fund drive, donations and bequests and the help of the provincial government.

There is still $95,000 outstanding. Some of this will be cleared through this year's one-night porchlight blitz, arranged for December 1.

As soon as the present debt is wiped out, plans will be completed for a further group of single units on the remaining acreage of the Cook Street property.

★ ★ ★

"The need for this type of housing is increasing," Hope says.

He proudly points to the fact that the Kiwanis Village Society of Victoria, headed this year by club president Sam Swetnam, was the first of its kind in North America and that it has been copied in both Canada and the United States.

He also gives you facts and figures which show that since the first unit was opened on Hibberson Crescent, back in 1952, Kiwanis Village in the over-all has housed some 500 residents.

Sixteen widows who started out with husbands in the village now occupy single units. There is also one of the original couples still in residence.

Keep all this in mind when you are making your budget for December and put something aside for the man or woman who calls at your door the night of the Kiwani blitz.

There's no doubt this is a project worthy of support.

Prison Life Gets Closer To Suburbia

LONDON (Reuters) — Prisoners at one of Britain's most modern prisons are taking part in an experiment that could bring sweeping changes in techniques of rehabilitation.

Working conditions at the Coldingley prison in Surrey, near London, are a far cry from the old days of rock-breaking and stitching mail bags.

Prisoners work a 40-hour, five-day week, receive training to union standards in skilled jobs, and punch in and out themselves. But they are still locked up in cells at night.

The aim of the experiment is to bring prison life closer to work in the outside world, allowing prisoners more responsibility and freedom to make their own decisions.

Coldingley has three production lines—a commercial laundry, an engineering shop making steel shelving and a workshop making road signs.

At work, the atmosphere is free and easy by prison standards. Said one prisoner as he surveyed hacksaws and files on his workbench: "I've got a nice collection of stuff here."

A prison officer close by commented: "Nothing missing at all after several weeks."

Drug Company Being Probed

By THOMAS W. LIPPMAN

WASHINGTON (WP)—The possibility that a major pharmaceutical company deliberately suppressed an effective new drug in order to protect the profits on an inferior product already being sold is being investigated by a federal grand jury here.

Records of the company, Johnson & Johnson, and of two other drug firms that also distribute the allegedly inferior product, were subpoenaed in October by the justice department's anti-trust division.

Also in question are the circumstances under which Johnson & Johnson obtained its patent on the new drug.

In an affidavit submitted to Chief Judge Edward M. Curran of U.S. district court, James H. Wallace Jr., a justice department attorney, said "it appears from documents in possession of the government that Johnson & Johnson procured the patent knowing that it had no legal right to it because of earlier printed disclosures of the same subject matter."

●

The documents subpoenaed from the three companies, he said, "may be relevant in determining the reasons underlying what may be a wrongful suppression of an antibiotic of claimed superiority in order to protect profits of the apparently less effective" drug.

Documents already in the government's possession, Wallace said later in court, indicate that Johnson & Johnson put the new product "on the shelf," even though it "is said by some drug companies to be significantly better, perhaps two times as good, with the same amount of substance taken by the patient."

The products in question are Griseofulvin, an oral fungicide used in the treatment of such ailments as athletes' foot, and Isogriseofulvin, a product which Johnson & Johnson has patented and which is alleged by the government to be superior.

●

Records on file at the courthouse show that Griseofulvin is distributed in this country by three companies, American Home Products, Schering Corp. and Johnson & Johnson.

They are the licencee of two British firms, Glaxo Group Ltd. and Imperial Chemical Industries Ltd., which hold the U.S. patents on dosage distribution of Griseofulvin.

The entire process by which this distribution and licensing arrangement was worked out, and the methods by which it operates, are the subject of a civil anti-trust suit against Glaxo and Imperial Chemical filed by the justice department last year. That case is still pending.

●

But since the licensing arrangement went into effect, Johnson & Johnson has obtained a patent on the new product, Isogriseofulvin. Court records show that this product has not been made available to the public.

Spokesmen for Johnson & Johnson at the company's headquarters in New Brunswick, N.J., said they knew nothing of the investigation and would be unable to comment until they consulted their legal department.

Smog Guard Defends Gorge Mill

Victoria's anti-smoke committee Monday defended B.C. Forest Products Ltd. mill against the attacks of its two latest critics.

Two writers to city hall asked that further action be taken against "that mill"—which committee members assumed to be the Gorge Road plant.

It was noted that in recent years mill operators had spent $750,000 to halt the worst pollution problems and was still researching other methods.

City Engineer James Garnett said the mill has made great strides in pollution control but received little credit for its efforts.

Garnett admitted, as he has several times in the past, that the city's anti-smoke bylaws were sometimes violated.

On the question as to whether or not the bylaw was strong enough Garnett said city officials "some one to tell us, someone to give us directives in this matter."

Ex-Minister Post Again

DRESDEN, Ont. (CP) — Rev. Russell D. Horsburgh will know by early next year if he will be allowed to return to the United Church ministry.

A committee of the London conference of the United Church of Canada is assessing the suitability of Mr. Horsburgh's return to the ministry.

The committee will report to the Kent presbytery at Dresden which is considering his readmission since his resignation in 1965. A final decision on the application is expected by "early next year."

Mr. Horsburgh was charged in 1964 with having encouraged immoral behavior among members of his youth group at a Chatham church.

He was found guilty on five of eight charges, but the Supreme Court of Canada quashed all charges against him in 1967 after some of the teen-agers whose evidence had convicted him admitted they had lied.

HAPPY END TO RETREATING ROMANCE

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Matilda Body and Coloman Ecker were married at the weekend—51 years after their romance was interrupted by the retreat of Ecker's cavalry unit from the Hungarian town of Satoraljaujhely in 1918.

Ecker lost contact with Matilda, eventually came to the United States, and settled in Santa Cruz, Calif. She recently came to the United States and read of Ecker in a Hungarian-American newspaper.

Learning each had been widowed, the couple resumed the romance which was broken off more than a half century before. Following their marriage, Coloman, 70, and Matilda, 71, said they would honeymoon in Hungary in the spring.

Farm Cuts Draw Blast In House

OTTAWA (CP) — The Opposition mounted a scathing attack on government farm policies Tuesday in a day-long Commons debate following an announcement of spending and staff cuts in the agriculture department.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said he was "seriously disturbed at the flippant attitude" of Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson in making the announcement.

The government easily defeated Conservative and NDP non-confidence motions 106 to 78.

Standing in the 264-seat House; L 154, PC 72, NDP 22, Creditiste 14, Independent 1, vacant 1.

The Conservative motion charged the government with trying to balance the budget for political reasons without regard for farmers. The NDP motion said the government has failed to provide farmers with additional cash income.

Mr. Olson said the new reductions would include program adjustments, reductions in purchases of equipment, less travel and ceilings on federal-provincial cost-sharing programs. He did not indicate the extent of staff cuts.

INCREASES FEES

There would be increased fees for some services the department provides farmers.

The greatest saving would come from a $10,000,000 reduction in the dairy support program to $115,000,000 from $125,000,000, Mr. Olson said.

The measures would take effect in 1970-71 after further consultation with the provinces and farm groups.

Mr. Stanfield said the government is using "the questionable excuse" of the need for further discussions to delay making a full policy statement on agriculture.

"I can't condemn this minister enough for his failure to produce a serious farm policy," Mr. Stanfield said.

It was the first "opposition day" of the new session and the Conservatives chose agriculture as the subject for debate.

SEES NO SOLUTIONS

Alf Gleave, NDP farm critic, said the grain marketing crisis is being aggravated by numerous unsolved problems in distribution and handling. He said government was cutting back in the services it gives to the people who depend most on government help.

Today, the Commons debates on second reading a bill to establish a corporation to manage all national parks.

John Diefenbaker (PC—Prince Albert), former prime minister, said the farm situation has deteriorated so much there is widespread talk of secession on the Prairies.

Harold Danforth (Kent-Essex), Conservative agriculture spokesman, said the government is preoccupied with balancing the budget for political reasons and has ignored the effects this will have on farmers.

He said the government is treating the small farmer—one earning under $2,500 a year—as if he had no right to be on the farm.

Inflation was forcing this type of farmer to take part-time jobs in the city where there was a high degree of unemployment.

SAYS PROGRESS MADE

Otto Lang, minister without portfolio responsible for the wheat board, said there has been progress in stabilizing world wheat prices and he was confident "any move in the future will be in an upward direction."

Advance cash payments to farmers for wheat still stored on their farms has amounted to $227,000,000 so far this year, he said, and payments are being made at the rate of $2,500,000 to $3,000,000 a week.

But the real problem facing wheat farmers and the government was world over-production. World wheat production totalled 10,000,000,000 bushels in each of the last four years, compared with an average of 8,600,000,000 in each of the previous four years.

As many countries had become more self-sufficient through wheat production, world wheat trade had dropped.

But the drop in exports has been less severe in Canada than in the United States or Australia, Mr. Lang said.

Smiling on the Inside

Spine-tingling experience for 10-year-old Richard LeNoury and the old grey whale (who ain't what she used to be). Richard slipped away from a Frank Hobbs School tour of the Provincial Museum to bone up on whale anatomy at close range. Judging by the toothless grin, the whale, who spent 10 years in a box in pieces, is enjoying his popularity.

Crisis Over Beds Prompts Plea For Welfare Aid

The province will be asked by the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health to increase welfare payments to private hospitals to prevent a desperate bed shortage in the Victoria area from worsening.

The board Tuesday decided to ask for "urgent consideration" of the increase, after reading a report on the sub-standard condition of several smaller private hospitals in the area.

The report was prepared by senior medical health officer, Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread.

After inspecting nine private hospitals in converted buildings, Whitbread said two of them should have been closed 16 months ago and the others phased out by 1971.

MAINLY WELFARE

"Closure of any of these hospitals would result in a catastrophe to the area as there is at present a long waiting list of patients requiring accommodation," he said.

The nine hospitals range in bed capacity from 12 to 45 with a total of 285 beds.

Welfare patients take up 203 of these beds, and hospital officials contend the provincial grants do not cover the cost of caring for these patients.

Whitbread said orders should be given to bring these hospitals up to provincial and municipal standards.

If improvements were ordered, however, some of the hospitals would likely close down, he said.

"In many cases the unwillingness on the part of management to maintain the buildings is due to a lack of income."

He said staffs are performing adequately in most of these hospitals despite salaries much lower than in the larger hospitals.

He said the increased welfare payments would mean that smaller hospitals could afford to meet the standards.

The board will also request the province to grant extension of the interim permits for the operation of the private hospitals in old buildings.

Whitbread said many owners are not maintaining the physical standards of the hospitals due to the short-term life expectancy of the hospitals.

"These hospital beds will be replaced when the 650 extended care beds have been constructed by the Regional Hospital Board," said Whitbread.

"We cannot expect construction of the extended care beds to be completed before 1971."

Board member and MLA-elect Dr. G. Scott Wallace said it is unlikely any of the 650 extended care beds approved for this area will be built before 1971.

"It's very nice to build new beds and tear down old ones," he said.

UNWISE MOVE

"What we really need are totally new beds."

Wallace said it would be unwise to exert pressure on small private hospitals to improve their facilities since they were trying to operate on less-than-adequate welfare rates.

"Financial support should be increased," he said. "If we lose any of these hospitals now the situation only gets worse."

Whitbread at the Oct. 15 health board meeting promised to name the older private hospitals that should be closed.

He did so for board members but did not make the names available to the press.

Private Hospitals Badly Off

Ogden Point Work Three Days Behind

Pressure of work backed up during the six-week B.C. longshoremen strike has put Ogden Point shipping as much as three days behind schedule.

Port agent F. J. Ritchie said the problem is being felt at other Island ports and on the lower mainland as ships that lined up awaiting the end of the strike last week occupy all available berths.

The result is that longshore gangs are working to capacity and because of the great volume of cargo to be handled, there now are insufficient gangs to clear the docks.

★ ★ ★

Once the work load peak has been reached, possibly within a week or two, shipping should again approach a normal level.

As an example of the delay facing ships discharging general cargo to take on lumber, plywood, pulp, paper or grain at Ogden Point, the new CPR lumber carrier J. V. Clyne left Tuesday night instead of Saturday.

★ ★ ★

Only two gangs were available for work on the ship Tuesday, and only one assigned to the Kostis Prios, also loading lumber. The latter ship stood idle for a day until a longshore gang was available.

The 13 gangs based in Victoria are also dispatched to Chemainus, Cowichan Bay and Crofton when required.

One Victoria gang, sent to Cowichan Bay, worked overtime to clear the Bodenstein from port Tuesday.

The Japanese freighter Kozan Maru, waited at Ogden Point an extra day, until longshoremen were unable to unload her cargo of steel. She left port Tuesday.

★ ★ ★

A freighter with Japanese oranges is expected to dock at Ogden Point Monday, a longshoreman official said.

He said she would call here first rather than head for Vancouver directly "because the warehouses over there are plugged and can't handle the traffic."

He added that as many oranges as possible would be unloaded at Victoria during one day's work. These would be slated for sale on Vancouver Island.

Apathy: It Can Strike Anyone

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Political apathy replaced public apathy at a meeting of the Capital Region Planning Board Tuesday.

The board had arranged a regional study session — one of a series — on a look at downtown Victoria.

But when the scheduled time arrived, only three politicians were present — Victoria Ald. Ian Stewart, regional planning board chairman; Saanich Ald. Edith Gunning, and Oak Bay Ald. Frances Elford.

Also present were planning board director Tony Roberts, staff planner John Northey; city planner Geoff Greenhalgh; city manager Dennis Young; and a reporter from the Victoria Daily Times.

• • •

Notification had been extended to all members of the Capital Regional Board and every elected municipal official in the area, said Ald. Stewart.

And that is approximately 50 politicians, although a number of them are unable to attend day-time meetings because of their work. (Three persons — Central Saanich Mayor Archibald Galbraith, North Saanich Ald. Trevor Davis and Sidney Ald. S. G. Gardner had attended the earlier business meeting).

"Because of the poor attendance, I will have to call the meeting off," said Ald. Stewart.

Only three days ago, at a Parksville seminar of the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities, 65 delegates from cities, towns, districts and villages up and down the island had discussed public apathy and made a number of suggestions to overcome this.

• • •

The apathy spread to Saanich public works committee Tuesday night, which was unable to pass motions because it lacked a quorum.

Earlier, council extended the membership of group B committees — which includes public works — to full council, or nine persons.

But only four showed up — chairman Ald. William Campbell and Aldermen Frank Waring, William Noel and Leslie Passmore. Also attending were seven municipal officials, two members of the public and two newspaper reporters.

At one point, where business was being held up pending the hopeful arrival of a fifth council member to make a quorum, Ald. Campbell said "it's very embarrassing."

And at another point, Ald. Noel deadpanned — "while we are talking about garbage and waiting for a quorum . . ."

• • •

The committee was informed that the new municipal garbage trucks have arrived and the service will start Jan. 17.

The municipality will advertise for staff and applications will be accepted from the staff of the present private contractor and municipal people "and we'll pick the best from both," said engineer Neville Life.

The two residents who waited unsuccessfully for the quorum, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Cox, asked that their property at 2680 Macdonald Drive be excluded from the sewerage enterprise area. The consensus was to turn down the request.

Finally, just over two hours after the public works committee meeting started, Ald. Alan Newberry arrived and a quorum was formed so decisions could be made.

Man Sentenced to 5 Years On Marijuana Trafficking

A 22-year-old Victoria man was sentenced in county court today to five years in the penitentiary for possession of marijuana for trafficking.

"It is clear you were cynically engaged in living off the weaknesses of others," Judge Montague Drake told Brock Douglas Flett of 428 Superior Street.

"The law takes a very serious view of this."

Crown counsel Edward St. J. Pollard said four packages containing 8.8 pounds of marijuana were found in a car driven by Flett on May 4.

NOT FIRST TIME

The car was stopped by Saanich police outside a house on Glanford Avenue. Four packages found in the back of the car were analysed as marijuana at the crime detection laboratory in Vancouver, and Flett's fingerprints were found on them.

Counsel said the car had a 1969 licence plate on the front and a 1968 plate on the back. Flett told police the owner of the car was in Wilkinson Road jail and the car had been loaned to him.

"The law has the responsibility of trying to stamp out trafficking in drugs," Pollard said, "and this is not the first time Flett has been before the courts.

"This is not a case for leniency but for deterring others from this practice."

Defence counsel C. A. Becker said a probation officer's report on Flett suggested a "minimum sentence," but Judge Drake noted that he had "a very poor record."

YOUTH WOUNDED IN STOMACH

A Sooke Road youth injured in a shooting accident Tuesday evening is in satisfactory condition at St. Joseph's Hospital today.

Harvey Heimbecker, 16, suffered a wound in the stomach when the .22 calibre rifle he was cleaning discharged.

Baird for Mayor, Not Alderman

Ald. Robert Baird is a candidate for mayor in the Dec. 6 municipal elections in Victoria.

The Times erroneously reported Wednesday that Baird is an official candidate for city council.

OWNER OF GOLD COINS FAILS TO SHOW AT CLINK

Rare gold coins held by Saanich police are attracting collectors — but so far the owner has failed to appear.

The coin collection was found by two brothers on a hike recently and turned over to police. It has been valued by experts at $5,000.

It seems quite a few people have lost gold coins.

Police Inspector John Post said today half a dozen collectors have been in touch to see if any of their lost coins have turned up in the find.

But so far nobody's description has been close to what police are holding — and not describing.

Post said coin collections are a favorite target for burglars and perhaps half a dozen are stolen annually in Saanich alone.

Arthur Mayse . . .

AT LEAST ONCE EACH year, my dear one and I take a long, hard look at our surroundings, and decide it's high time we hunted another place. This seizure may occur in soggy, miserable little February, or perhaps in June when the lawn grass grows fast, and the weeds even faster.

In any case, the pattern follows more or less these lines.

We have been moiling and toiling for several hours when one of us straightens a weary back. The other yanks a handful of chickweed or picks up one more blowdown branch, then follows suit.

Win says, "I've been thinking."

"Yeah. Me too."

★

Then whichever of us gets to it first airs the dark, rebellious thought.

"We don't have to do this, you know. We could find ourselves a place that didn't have a garden. Just a little patch of grass and maybe a couple of window boxes."

"Or it could be on a rock outcrop," the other chips in.

We keep talking it up, and pretty soon we have evolved a mental picture of this dream-home.

★

It will be neither too large nor too small. It will have trees, but not so many that leaf-raking will become a burden. Naturally, the basement will be dry, and the taxes low-low.

Our next step in the progression is to run through the Houses for Sale ads, which offer the most inspired writing you'll find in print.

To show you what I mean, here are a few choice snatches from a specimen blurb:

"Here is a distinguished six-room home in an exclusive residential district."

(Depends on how you interpret "distinguished." I thought it looked kind of funny, with its breakneck roof-slope that swooped to a gimicky little peak above the front door. But the district was exclusive, all right, and especially in icy winter weather. Its slick hills excluded traffic so effectively that only those who had no recourse would attempt them.)

I could go on about the "fine rockery" which consisted of a few shale slabs stuck on end like so many gravestones, and the arbitrary slopes of thinly-grassed fill that became "three rolling terraces."

★

But it's enough to state that we once owned the Toronto house in question, and were so impressed by the description that we came within an ace of whipping it off the market before someone else grabbed it.

Anyway, the upshot of this occasional discontent is that we hop in the car and go searching for a house closer to our hearts' desire.

This pursuit began when we were still battling Ontario moles — be glad we don't have 'em here! — for possession of those rolling terrances.

Since then, it has led us into and out of many on Open House, and landed us in various predicaments.

★

There was the place accessible only by a string of planks across mud. I teetered off the second board, plunged ankle-deep, and pulled one foot out of its shoe. Then I tried to free the other foot, and lost that shoe. Finally, groping for both shoes, I fell into the wallow, and escaped only after some stern hauling by my wife and the builder's agent.

It was a nice place, but we decided as I recovered my shoes with the help of a handy two-by-four that it was not for us.

Neither was the stately old white elephant that boasted a completely sinister black marble bath — or the ranch-type with the warped cupboard doors that only a crowbar could open — or its neighbor with the patch of poison oak out back that I mistook for strayed Virginia creeper.

Once, though, we really began to think we had it made.

But before we could get excited about our find, the man dusting his rose bushes next door sidled over the property line.

"Do you know where the storm water off the back slope goes?" he asked.

We didn't, and it was a point worth considering.

★

He pointed his dust gun and said, "Into that basement."

Eventually, a time comes in such questings when we realize that there are good houses, bad houses and so-so houses. But no dream-houses.

With that fact re-discovered, we are ready to go home to a haven that may be less than perfect, but has improved remarkably during our absence.

Bill WALKER

Once upon a Sunday there was little else to do but sit at home and watch television. This was after church, and the chores had been attended to.

But no more, unless you are a football fan. And there will be no denial here that the best place to watch a football game is on television. And if your neighbor has a color set, that is better yet.

The real reason that there is no other excuse is that the sports life of this community definitely abounds on a Sunday, so much so that the sports editors are hard pressed to find space to put the stuff.

And isn't this good, that in a generation where there are so many conflicts, demonstrations, moratoriums, and violent social changes, sport almost alone seems to be the one avenue that can provide an outlet and an activity for the whole family.

Because people can unite about sports, even though their loyalties be traditionally opposed; can root for the good guys and bad guys on a common level; can talk about Saturday's game at the office on Monday morning, and by doing these things can get their minds, if only briefly, off that horribly complex world ouside.

But this was to be a Sunday activity bit, not a moral discourse on the course of history. And here, therefore, is the for instance I started to tell you about.

Last Sunday, in just one particular area of this sun-blessed land of ours (Canadian Press and other Canadian cities take note) there were no less than eight activities to attract the attention of the sports buff, and almost all were in progress at the same time.

At Centennial Stadium, there was the Island Juvenile football final between Hornets and Farmers. At 50 cents, it was a steal for the 1,800 fans. The football was that interesting, even though the stands must rank as colder than those at Macdonald Park. But that's football, and to the football fan it shouldn't matter.

●

Nearby, over the fence to the southeast to be exact, there was a soccer game between Uvic Norsemen and Cowichan Saints; and nearby again, on the adjoining pitch to the east, there was an English rugby contest between Uvic Vikings and Cowichan, which turned out to a rout for the finely-trained collegians.

And would you believe another "nearby" to the east, in the Uvic gymnasium. This is where the Uvic basketball teams, Vikings and Jayvees, were hosting two Vancouver teams, and beating them, 90-84, and 65-53, respectively.

This was all on Sunday afternoon, but earlier if you'd been around, there was action of other sorts down the street and across the road at the Racquet Club.

Inside, curling was in full swing, first with the competitive league, and later with a family group, where everyone joins in. And at the same time, if hockey is your dish, the heroics of that sort, midget style, were being served up in the Racquet Club rink.

Tennis anyone?

Thought you'd never ask, because the No. 1 and No. 2 courts of the Racquet Club were also in use on this day when it snowed in Regina, Edmonton, Calgary and way points.

●

All the while, of course, the Argos were giving it to Ottawa Roughriders in the Eastern Conference football final, the New York Jets were getting theirs from Kansas City, and the early finishers of their regular 18-hole round at Uplands Golf Club, nearby to the south, were getting home in time to catch the San Francisco-Baltimore thriller.

But that's on TV, you say. Sure it is. And as noted before, it's excellent entertainment, and excellent competition.

The point is that here in Victoria we have a choice, a remarkably wide choice. There is more than enough in the way of fun for everybody, on this Sunday or on any other, because field hockey, bowling, fishing, sailing, cycling, badminton, squash and several other athletic or recreational endeavors have not been mentioned.

And this variety is good for people, because in the contrast between the harrowing experiences of life and the simplicity of the game lies one of the fundamental reasons for the deep interest and passions that sports arouse.

So why not take a look around your own neighborhood some Sunday?

Even if you don't participate or know the contestants, you might be pleasantly surprised at how satisfying that look could be.

Cowick, Little Show Way As Cats Score 7-2 Win

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Victoria Cougars are missing a centre today, and New Westminster Royals' coach Dick Spring wishes he could be so lucky.

Spring, it would appear, not only lacks a centre, but also is missing wingers and defencemen. And lay the emphasis on plurality. The needs are more than one.

Only in goal, where Dave McLelland serves well, do Royals escape out-and-out anaemia. That was about the only point scored Tuesday night when the Cougars coasted to a 7-2 B.C. Junior Hockey League victory over the Royals.

It is a problem, not only for Spring but also for league president Howie Hamilton. Tuesday's turnout at Memorial Arena was listed as 1,092. Apart from the Cougar scoring plays, there wasn't much the fans could enjoy.

NINE SKATERS

Spring dressed only 12 players, the required legal minimum. The "bench" included spare goaltender Maurice L'Heureux and Bob Buchanan, neither of whom stepped on the ice in actual combat. Another player, Rick Kennedy, took two quick turns but did not skate again after the first period.

Spring went most of the way with only nine players, and that is like going into a war without any guns.

Spring pleads player poverty. That may be so but Ron Matthews, on a recent visit to Victoria, insists his "last cuts" from Vancouver Centennials' camp were directed to New Westminster. Matthews hinted his castoffs "weren't given much of a look."

STILL WINLESS

Matthews' assessment of young talent can't be that bad because his club happens to be treading in third, a point behind Cougars. The rag-tag Royals, in case you're wondering, are still looking for their first win after sixteen (XVI) games.

After 16 games, this would appear a lost season for Royals. Somehow, the guiding lights of New Westminster have lost their sense of direction. The obvious thing to do is rebuild for next season.

Royals are neither rebuilding nor mending. Not with nine skaters!

The nine who skated Tuesday must be given sympathy and credit for courage. Though playing their fourth game in five days, they refused to roll over and play dead just becuase the Cougars had the guns and the Royals didn't.

COWICK ERUPTS

They skated on even terms with Victoria for the first period (1-1), and it was 2-2 at the halfway point in the game. Then a three-goal splurge, including two goals by Bruce Cowick within a matter of six seconds, put the Victoria team on a coasting-home track.

Most of the crowd missed the second goal becuase of a flareup between two fans behind the Royals' bench.

Rob Little also scored two goals while the singles went to Pat Askew, Ted Plowe and Shayne Webster. Jim Dalzell and Mike Andruff counted for the Royals.

Listed as missing from action was centre Bill Penny, the former Moose Jaw Canuck who showed up in Victoria several days ago. He was signed, played in three games but failed to show up for Tuesday's game.

Cougar coach Doug Anderson was at a loss to explain Penny's whereabouts.

IN VANCOUVER

Cougars, continuing a heavy schedule which calls for them to play six games in 10 days, move to Vancouver tonight, then swing to the Okanagan for a three-game weekend trip.

Tuesday's game was a tame affair, with the Cats drawing four of the game's seven penalties.

Anderson found greatest delight in the play of Little and Cowick. The latter, in particular, seemed to be skating at his best speed.

But for the work of McLelland, and supporting pipes behind him, the Cougars might have have hit double figures. Webster, Murray Kennett and Cowick all glanced shots off posts.

McLelland was a standout with a 35-stop display.

COMPUTER ORGANIZES BIGGEST CUP PARADE

MONTREAL (UPI) — The 1969 Grey Cup football parade here Nov. 29 will be the largest in Grey Cup history, including 40 floats, 30 bands, 20 majorette groups, and 75 color entries, officials announced today.

The parade, guided by 250 marshals connected by an elaborate network of communications, will be organized by a computer, with a pre-printed time schedule to be met at a series of checkpoints.

Parade grand marshals are to be former Canadian Football League quarterback star Sam "The Rifle" Etcheverry and Canadian tennis ace Bob Bedard.

Temperature, according to forecasters will probably be between 25 and 35 degrees. This prediction is based on 98-year history of Montreal weather, which includes a record low Nov. 29, 1891, of five below zero and a record high in 1966 58 degrees.

Entertainer Can Wear Shaggy Sideburns Now

By The Canadian Press

"This is the best seat in the rink," said Eddie Shack, sitting on the end of Toronto Maple Leafs' bench. "I should know. I've sat here often enough. I think they should put my name on it."

Shack, also known as The Entertainer and Fast Eddie, now is with Los Angeles Kings but he hasn't forgotten his bench-warming days with the Leafs.

His erratic playing style often got him in trouble and prompted former general manager and coach Punch Imlach to relegate Shack to the end spot on the players' bench where he sat Tuesday waiting for his Los Angeles team-mates to show up for practice.

The Kings meet the Leafs tonight in one of five scheduled games.

REMEMBERS RULES

Imlach traded Shack to Boston Bruins in 1967 for Murray Oliver and this spring he was traded again to Los Angeles.

But he still remembers as well the rules Imlach laid down regarding such things as sideburns.

"I need a haircut," he admitted Tuesday. "My sideburns have gotten too long, but out in Los Angeles this is what they expect."

The Kings management, meanwhile, held talks with defenceman Bill White in an attempt to bring him back to the club.

BOWMAN REPLIES

General manager and coach Scotty Bowman of St. Louis Tuesday answered charges of inciting brawls made against him by Bud Poile, general manager of Philadelphia Flyers.

Poile said in Quebec Monday that it was too much of a coincidence that St. Louis players were involved in four major brawls since 1967.

Bowman shrugged off Poile's comments, calling it a "minor-league stunt" designed to attract publicity.

MIAMI SCOUT LOOKING BUT HE WON'T TOUCH?

TORONTO (CP) — Joe Thomas, general manager of Miami Dolphins in the American Football League, says he "wouldn't ask" a Canadian Football League player to play out his option but he wants "to be ready" when a player does decide to move south.

Thomas, who once assisted Hamp Pool coach Toronto Argonauts, was here on a scouting trip where he watched Sunday's Eastern conference playoff between Argos and Ottawa Roughriders.

He was particularly interested in offensive end Margene Adkins whose pass-catching talents were not exploited as usual Sunday by Ottawa.

"I'd like to have seen him catch a few more," Thomas said. "But I saw enough . . ."

Adkins is playing out his option with the Rough Riders and will be eligible for the United States college draft next season.

"We have to find out about him and be ready," Thomas said.

Keys Has Hottest Hand But He Plays It Cool

CALGARY (CP)—Coach Eagle Keys feels football is an unpredictable game, and he isn't about to hazard a guess as to the outcome of tonight's second game in the Western Conference final between his Saskatchewan Roughriders and Calgary Stampeders.

"We've beaten them four straight times, which would indicate we're the best team, but I wouldn't rule out their coming back to win two straight," Keys told a news conference Tuesday night.

After his club's 17-11 victory in the first game of the best-of-three series in Regina last Saturday, Keys was sure of only one thing—the Stampeders were not going to try to run against his club.

That left Saskatchewan in the position of stopping the Calgary passing attack, which saw Jerry Keeling complete 23 of 45 attempts for 408 yards Saturday.

"We spent all week getting ready for people like Herm Harrison, Gerry Shaw and Terry Evanshen," Keys said of the first game, "and they surprised us with Bob McCarthy."

McCarthy, used sparingly during the season because of an injury, pulled in a handful of passes against Saskatchewan.

BARWELL SIDELINED

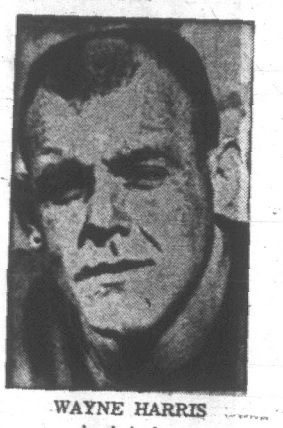

The Roughriders will go into action at 7 p.m. PST without flanker Gord Barwell, knocked out of the first game in the second quarter with a shoulder injury. Keys said Al Rankin and Lance Fletcher will probably alternate at the position.

"Rankin has got speed, but Fletcher has more experience," he said.

Keys was interested in the weather forecast for the game. It calls for Chinook winds, with gusts to as much as 60 miles an hour, and temperatures in the 30s.

Keys dropped out to McMahon stadium Tuesday, but found the field covered with a tarpaulin with heaters blowing on to the field in an effort to soften the surface.

Calgary will have middle linebacker Wayne Harris back in harness. The nine-year veteran missed the first game with a knee injury, although his absence wasn't felt too much when rookie Craig Koinzan came up with a great game in a replacement role.

Conservation Plan Requires Engineers' Aid

VANCOUVER — A provincial biologist said Tuesday that engineers have been called in to help solve the problem of disappearing duck marshes on the lower British Columbia mainland.

The engineers will study the possibility of dyking three tidal islands in the Fraser River, said Bryan Gates of the Fish and Wildlife branch.

He said the dykes would join Duck, Barber and Woodward Islands to form 1,200 acres of waterfront marsh in the south arm of the river esturay.

"The three islands have the potential to become one of the most important waterfowl marshes in the lower Fraser Valley," he said.

Loggers Clipped

DUNCAN — Marg Godfrey fired 14 points to lead scorers in an exhibition women's basketball game here Tuesday but her McKenzie Loggers team dropped a 40-35 decision to the University of Victoria Jayvees. Lydia Gledhill paced Jayvees with 13 points.

Rebuilding Chore Ottawa's Problem

OTTAWA (CP)—Win or lose in Saturday's deciding game of the Eastern Football Conference finals against Toronto Argonauts, coach Frank Clair faces a major rebuilding job on his Ottawa Rough Riders next season.

When Ottawa quarterback Russ Jackson steps on the field in an attempt to lead Riders into the Grey Cup game despite an eight-point deficit, it will be his last game before an Ottawa crowd.

Jackson announced earlier that this would be his last year as a player. He wants to devote his time to the teaching profession and has rejected promotions in the city high schools until his football days are over.

But other outstanding players also are considering retirement or leaving Riders for greener fields in the United States.

Halfback Ronnie Stewart is among the expected retirements. Now 34, he also is playing his 12th year with Riders but hasn't been as prominent in a rushing role since Ottawa acquired Vic Washington last season. He is still highly regarded as a blocker.

Also expected to call it a day is centre Jerry Selinger. This is Selinger's 14th year with the Riders.

POIRIER ALSO DOUBTFUL

Another doubtful next year is defensive halfback Joe Poirier. After 10 years with Riders, there's been talk he is ready to retire.

Contract and other troubles could pluck three more stars from the Ottawa lineup.

Washington, now on the injured list, has said he won't play another game in Canada. He says his wife is unhappy away from their home in Plainfield, N.J.,

Riders say however they still believe Washington will stay here.

End Margene Adkins and defensive halfback Gene Gaines are playing out their options. Both are having salary disputes with the club and say they won't be back next year unless their demands are met.

Meanwhile, the outlook is for a muddy field for Saturday's game. The city has had a long rainy spell and there's little chance of a dry field by the weekend.

Race Series Showed Big Jump at Gate

WESTPORT, Conn. (UPI) — More than 401,000 spectators attended the expanded 11-race Canadian - American Challenge Cup series this year, the Sports Car Club of America has announced.

The previous high for the series was 276,000 spectators for last year's 10-race series.

A total of $814,384 was paid in prizes to the drivers in the series, more than double last year's total of $401,520. Bruce McLaren, winner of the series, earned $160,950, and teammate Denis Hulme won $151,134.

Seventy-one drivers from 11 countries participated in the series.

Redgrave Leads Frostbite Event

Bob Redgrave boated a whopping 28-pound, 10-ounce chinook (spring) salmon to win the November "frostbite" fishing derby staged by the Chinook Club at Saanich Inlet.

Second and third were John Sadler and John Rose.

Next "frostbite" event for Chinook members is slated on Dec. 14.

Red Sox Slip at Gate But Still Top League

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Red Sox led the American League in attendance this year with 1,833,246, while Washington Senators had the biggest increase with a rise of 371,445 over their 1968 total, according to figures released by the office of president Joe Cronin Tuesday.

Divisional champions Minnesota Twins and Baltimore Orioles were the only other teams besides Washington to show increases.

The Red Sox, despite leading the league, were among seven clubs falling below their 1968 totals.

The other two teams, Kansas City Royals and Seattle Pilots, were new in 1969 and thus have no comparative figures.

The total attendance for the first 12-team season was 12,124,014, the highest in league history but well below the 11,317,387 of last year or the record 11,336,923 of 1967 on a per team average basis.

The biggest decrease this year was by Detroit Tigers, who broke the two million mark with a 2,031,847 mark in their pennant winning 1968 season but fell to 1,577,481 this year.

BRAZIL PLANS SPECIAL STAMP . . . . . TO HONOR KING OF SOCCER

Pele's 1,000 Rates Greater Than Babe's 714

SANTOS, Brazil (AP) — Pele, the great Brazilian soccer star, has 999 career goals and some 150,000 screaming fans will have their eyes glued to his No. 10 jersey when he takes the field tonight in Rio de Janeiro.

When Pele makes No. 1,000, it will be comparatively a greater feat than that of Babe Ruth's 714 lifetime home runs in baseball. While several present-day baseball stars slowly are gaining on the Babe's record, Pele's closest competitor, another Brazilian, named Flavio, has only about 550 goals.

Pele is without a doubt the best-known personality in Brazil.

When he scores No. 1,000, the Brazilian government will release a postage stamp with his picture in it.

Off the field, Pele has a leading role in a television science fiction series, endorses Brazilian sugar, soccer shoes and razor blades and owns land and apartments.

He and another players have bought the controlling interest in an elastic band factory. Their latest idea for a new product; perfumed elastic for women's lingerie.

Pele, whose real name is Edson Arantes do Nascimento, 29, grew up in a poor town in the interior of Brazil. Having little education and being a Negro indicated a dismal future.

But in 1956, he joined the Santos soccer team. He has been with Santos ever since and a permanent fixture on the Brazilian selection All-Star team. In 1958 and 1962 he led his country to world championships.

Despite rumored offers of millions of dollars to play for teams in Mexico and Italy, Pele plans to stay in Brazil at least until after the 1970 World Cup finals.

In 1959, Pele turned in his best, single-season performance, 125 goals. Last year he made just 60, because opposing teams now cover him with two — sometimes three — men.

Perhaps with a bit of modesty — perhaps with a bit of consideration for his loyal fans in Brazil — Pele refrained from making his 1,000th goal last week during an exhibition game against a weak team in the far-off city of Joao Pessoa. He scored No. 999 in the first half but Santos' regular goalie suspiciously became injured and Pele played goal for the rest of the game.

Somehow, tonight's game in Rio's Maracana Stadium — the world's largest — is a more fitting setting for the crowning achievement of a king.

SET DOWN for three games by National Hockey League president Clarence Campbell today was Oakland Seals' goaltender Gary Smith (above). One-time Victoria Maple Leaf player also was fined $50 for shoving incident with referee Ron Wicks.

VIKING VIEWS

By Brian Butters

University of Victoria athletes are bracing themselves for the busiest weekend of the season so far. No less than three tournaments are being hosted by Uvic teams and two other squads open their seasons in the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

For water-polo enthusiasts, the action this weekend is the annual Uvic Invitational tournament, to be held at the Crystal Garden Saturday.

Six teams are scheduled to compete in the affair, two of them from Victoria. Vancouver's two entries represent the Vancouver Water-Polo Association "A" and "B" teams. The Oregon Athletic Club, along with the defending champions of tne tourney, the Huskies from University of Washington, also will compete.

The two city teams are the Vikings and the Victoria All-Stars. In the Uvic lineup will be Dave Armstrong, Jim McConnan, and Len Hindle.

Former Viking star Brian Pearce leads a contingent of Uvic alumni including Aldy Meinhardt and Dave Cruise under the colors of the All-Stars.

An interesting feature of the double-knockout tournament will be the presence of the coach of the Canadian national water-polo team, who will be on the lookout for outstanding players. The national team goes on tour to Mexico and Cuba over the Christmas holidays and it is possible several local players might be selected from their performances in the Uvic tournament.

★ ★ ★

Volleyballers will have the opportunity of taking in the Uvic Invitational tournament. Competing will be seven senior men's teams from the lower mainland and Victoria.

Uvic and U.B.C. are both entering two teams, and the Victoria Y and Canadian Forces Base Esquimalt will also compete. From Vancouver comes a volleyball team known simply as M.A.R.C (Mens' Athletic Recreation Club), who presently are the best in B.C. An alumnus of Uvic, Bob Vosburgh, a member of the Canadian national team, plays for M.A.R.C., who are favoured to take top honors in the tournament.

The U.B.C. team is being touted as the best collegiate team in Western Canada and last weekend gave M.A.R.C. a good battle before losing a match. C.F.B. Esquimalt has had good teams in the past and they, along with Uvic, should pose a threat to M.A.R.C. and U.B.C.

Playing on the Uvic "A" team will be three graduates of Claremont High: Greg Russell Ken Lundeen, and Jim Barker. Lundeen is presently recovering from a shoulder injury but should be fit for the weekend. Allen Graves. Mimby Sihota and Neil Coutts make up the rest of the varsity squad. The "B" team will be composed of Clayton Lloyd-Jones, Bruce Smith, Wayne Forland, Debey Diey, Gord Hudson and Jim Wylie.

The round-robin tournament starts at 9:30 a.m. and continues all day Saturday.

★ ★ ★

Soon after the volleyball teams leave the gym at Uvic, the basketball crowd takes over. On Friday and Saturday nights, the Vikings take on W.C.I.A.A. opponents for the first time in basketball action. Meanwhile, the Vikettes will be involved in Inter-City Womens' League play in Vancouver.

As if all this isn't enough to make the weekend a busy one, the womens' field hockey team is sponsoring a tournament as well. Known formally as the Pacific Northwest Evergreen Field Hockey Conference, the Uvic organizers have turned the name into simply the "Tweed Tournament."

However the tournament isn't really a tournament, it's more like an un-tournament. There are three continuous days of play. Friday, Saturday and Sunday, yet there is no formal winner declared at the end of it all. It's more a casual get-together, although the 23 teams entered certainly won't treat their games that way. Competition will be on three levels so as to match up the better teams.

★ ★ ★

For the first time Centennial Stadium will be used for field hockey games, as will the Uvic soccer pitch for the weekend.

Among the teams coming with be 19 American colleges in Washington, Oregon and Idaho, as well as U.B.C. and Simon Fraser. Games will be played at 9, 10, and 11 in the mornings and 1. 2. and 3 in the afternoons.

In rugby action the weekend, Uvic teams are slated to play two first-division games Saturday. The Vikings tackle the Castaways in what should be one of the better-matched games of the young season. Play starts at 2:00 at Uvic. Elsewhere the Norsemen play the Oak Bay Wanderers at Windsor Park, also at 2:00.

Another varsity squad to open W.C.I.A.A. competition this weekend is the hockey team. Vikings travel to Winnipeg to play games against University of Manitoba and Winnipeg University.

The season should prove to be challenging for the Vikings, as they often encountered problems against W.C.I.A.A. teams in exhibitions last season. A year in this league should toughen the boys up.

Travelling with the Vikings will be goalies Fred Tenisci and Greg Larsen along with defencemen Stan Ruzicka, the team captain, Jim Haddrell, Ralph Halsall, John Hughes and Terry Yalewego. Forward lines will be drawn from among Dave Cousins, who toiled with the junior Cougars last year, Bob Buie. Bill Westover. Paul Hanson, Larry Hackman, Hugh Trask, Dwight Folk, Doug Carter and Gary Hales.

Shuttle Spotlight Shines on Doubles

Mixed doubles pairings made a move Tuesday to bring the spotlight on lesser-flight play.

Gruelling, three-game sets were the order of the evening in handicap competition of the Saanich Open badminton championships at Brentwood Community Hall.

Brentwood juniors Geraldine Pugh and Gerry Mounce prevailed in the night's longest and most exciting match, defeating Val Kent and Bob Davies 13-15, 15-14, 15-13.

Brentwood's Muriel Knott and Dave Nisbet downed Pam Davies and Vern Pratt of Esquimalt, 13-15, 15-11, 15-6; Marilyn Sluggett and Bill Powell turned on Brentwood clubmates Serena and Martin Woods, 15-11, 5-15, 15-6, and Marion and Keith Dixon from the Cordova Bay club outlasted youngsters Diana Marrion and Dan Woods 8-15, 15-12, 15-9.

Play this evening swings into open competition.

Tonight's draw:

7:30 p.m.—Ross Woodland vs. Bill Chudyk; Bob McMynn vs. Dave Howells; Bob Hunt vs. Keith Dixon.

8:00—Harry Sadd and Kay Savnikoff vs. Vern Prat and Martin Horn; Muriel Knott and Colleen Kelly vs. Dee Lim and Lynn Polson; June Bickford and Gil Newton vs winner.

10:15—Jim Wells and Tut Jones vs. Roy Coburn and Dan Lyle; men's "B" singles final; Colleen Kelly and Charlie Faulkner vs. Geraldine Pugh and Gerry Mounce.

11:00—Virginia Guenther and Martin Woods vs. Maureen and E. Hibberson; Penny Brown and McMynn vs. Val Kent and Goodmanson.

Kiniski Tackles Tolos in Feature

Gene Kiniski tackles John Tolos in the feature bout of a professional wrestling card Saturday at 8:15 p.m. in Memorial Arena.

In other bouts, starting at 8:15 p.m., Dutch Savage squares off with Steve Bolus, Crusher Morowski takes on Jerry London and the duo of Sky Lo-Low and Bad-Boy Shields battles with Joey Russell and Freddy Barron in a tag-team match.

ELEVATED from army sergeant to professional golf's "Player-o-the-Year" is Orville Moody. The 35-year-old pro was surprise winner of U.S. Open in June, 20 months after leaving U.S. Army to join the tour.

Lunde's Five Pace Canucks

VANCOUVER (CP) — Len Lunde blasted in a record-tying five goals to give Vancouver Canucks an easy 5-2 victory here over Salt Lake City Golden Eagles before 7,448 fans in the only Western Hockey League game scheduled Tuesday night.

Lunde put on an outstanding performance scoring two goals in each the first and second periods and adding another in the final to account for all Vancouver's goals.

The victory moved Vancouver into a second-place tie with San Diego Gulls and left them two points back of first-place Portland Buckaroos.

Dan Shock and Bruce Carmichael replied for the Eagles, who remain in sixth place, one point back of Denver Spurs.

Lunde opened the scoring at 7:10 of the first period hitting the corner behind Salt Lake netminder Russ Gillow from 35 feet.

BREAKAWAY RUN

He picked up his second marker less than four minutes later, banging in the rebound on Cleland Mortson's close-in shot.

Lunde made it 3-0 at 5:34 of the second period scoring unassisted on a breakaway while his own club was short handed.

He then made it 4-0 late in the second period.

Lunde made it 5-1 at 3:34 in the final and Carmichael rounded out the scoring at 16:23 beating Vancouver netminder George Gardner in a goal-mouth scramble.

Hockey Canada Charts Five-Year Quality Plan

CHARLES HAY
. . .two goals

WINNIPEG (CP) — Hockey Canada's board of governors Tuesday announced establishment of a five-year program, not only for development of the national team but to foster hockey in general.

The plan, announced at a news conference following the governors' meeting, encompasses all areas of the game with particular emphasis on high school and intercollegiate levels.

"While our immediate goal is the 1970 world hockey championship, we have another program which will be of even more far-reaching importance," said Hockey Canada president Charles Hay.

"We have committed ourselves to a five-year plan for improving the quality of hockey in Canada, with particular emphasis on the high school and intercollegiate levels. This program, which will be undertaken immediately, was approved unanimously today by our directors."

HAS TWO OBJECTIVES

The federal minister charged with the responsibility of Hockey Canada, Health Minister John Munro, followed those remarks by emphasizing that the organization has two simple objectives:

"To ice a good national team and to foster more and improved play."

"It begins with co-operation . . . between the government, the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, the professional players, the colleges and the schools."

In answer to those who criticized Hockey Canada for not approaching Bobby Hull during his recent dispute with Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League, Munro said such an approach was impossible.

"Hockey Canada cannot encourage him to breach that contract unless it wants war, financial and otherwise—and no co-operation from the NHL," he said.

FACES MANY TASKS

Referring to the national team, Munro said Hockey Canada faces a number of tasks.

Besides building a contender in world hockey competition, the organization must "establish good and realistic relations with European countries, using the abilities of external affairs personnel in order to achieve the goal of open competition."

Said Munro:

"I am fed up with the dual and phoney standards of morality in international hockey—one for the European nations, another more stringent standard for Canadians."

But while the goal is open competition, Hay is confident Canada can win the 1970 tournament slated for Montreal March 12-20 and Winnipeg March 22-29.

The question of who will play on the Canadian team still is unanswered, but Hockey Canada officials say that is because they themselves are not sure.

Jockey Club Lists 'Retired' Horses

VANCOUVER—Names of more than 150 horses have been removed from the roster of animals eligible to race at tracks operated by the British Columbia Jockey Club.

On its annual "retired list" the Jockey Club this week named 156 horses that will not be granted stable accommodation in 1970 at any track operating under the club's jurisdiction.

Racing at Vancouver's Exhibition Park and Sandown Park, near Sidney, is directed by the BCJC.

Age, infirmity, performance or opinions of stewards that some animals "are not of a standard or calibre conducive to the best interests of racing" are reasons given by the club for banning the following horses:

Coach Leaves Seattle Team

SEATTLE (AP)—Frank Crosetti, who switched to Seattle Pilots in 1969 after being a New York Yankee player and coach from 1932 to 1968, lasted only one year in his job.

Pilots general manager Marvin Milkes said Tuesday that Crosetti, Seattle's third base coach, has been given his unconditional release at his own request and will probably join another American League club in a few days.

PEOPLE IN ST. LOUIS JUST LOVE THE BLUES

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Attendance has been so good for the St. Louis Blues, of the National Hockey League, that club vice-president Sidney Salomon III says a closed-circuit television system may be installed for those who can't get in the arena.

"If we continue to draw the crowds we're drawing," Salomon said, "it has real potential. But we won't come to it this year."

The remodeled arena, where the Blues play, seats 15,800, but the club has drawn an average of 16,285 for the first seven games this year.

Some 2,000 fans lined up Monday, many waiting as long as 11 hours, to buy some of the 90,000 tickets that went on sale for the 31 remaining home games.

Tiny War Affects Trade

By Mario Guillermo Duron

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (Reuters)—Tensions and bitterness resulting from a five-day war between Honduras and El Salvador in July finally are beginning to lessen, but the presidents of both countries still won't talk to each other.

They won't reopen trade relations either, and this is not only hurting them, it has collapsed a five-country Central American common market to which they both belong.

The market was formed in 1961 with Nicaragua, Costa Rica and Guatemala as the other three members and with economic integration the eventual aim.

The five small countries were co-ordinating labor laws and monetary practices and making progress toward free trade when the war broke out over a border area dispute, leaving several hundred persons dead.

In the aftermath Nicaragua accused El Salvador of breaking several regional agreements by placing tariffs on some imports supposed to be unrestricted and buying other goods outside Central America.

Nicaragua has proposed an early meeting of the five foreign ministers to consider suspending the common market. But Guatemala is trying to get it moving again and has called for a meeting soon between President Fidel Sanchez Hernandez of El Salvador and President Oswaldo Lopez Arellano of Honduras to begin taking action to that end.

WON'T GET TOGETHER

But the two countries are not ready to resume direct contacts and the re-establishment of diplomatic and commercial relations seem a long way off. Recently, however, telephone communications were resumed, although direct land or air mail is not yet being exchanged.

There also is a total unofficial boycott on Salvadorean goods in Honduras and Honduran grain is not reaching El Salvador. El Salvador, the most densely-populated country in the region, needs to import this grain and reports from San Salvador, the capital city, indicate that some food prices are already beginning to rise sharply.

In Honduras, the government has kept a tight grip on food prices, although gasoline prices have increased because government storage tanks and installations were damaged in the Salvadorean bombing raids at the start of the war.

One of the most difficult problems still facing the Honduran government is what attitude it should take toward the large Salvadorean population living in Honduras, whose presence was a major factor in precipitating the war.

The government has indicated that only those Salvadoreans fulfilling the tough demands of a controversial immigration law will be allowed to remain in Honduras. However, an understanding attitude has aparently been taken toward Salvadoreans married to Hondurans and Salvadorean couples who have children born in the country.

Helicopter Becomes Sky Platform

WASHINGTON (AP) — A helicopter has been able to hover at altitudes up to 10,000 feet, over a given location, for hours at a time by sipping fuel through a metal hose two miles long, the U.S. Navy disclosed recently.

The navy said the "elevated platform" concept has important potential uses, both military and commercial, but it did not identify them.

Feasibility tests using a standard navy Sikorsky 5-H3A helicopter were conducted at Huntsville, Ala., in a program called Operation Long Drink.

On the ground, an aluminum hose attached to the craft unwounded from a spool as the helicopter climbed and rewound when the aireraft descended.

Once the pilot had attained his desired altitude, he switched the helicopter controls to an automatic system that kept the craft at a stationary hover hour after hour, without directional signals of any kind from the ground crew, the navy said.

Growth Encouraged

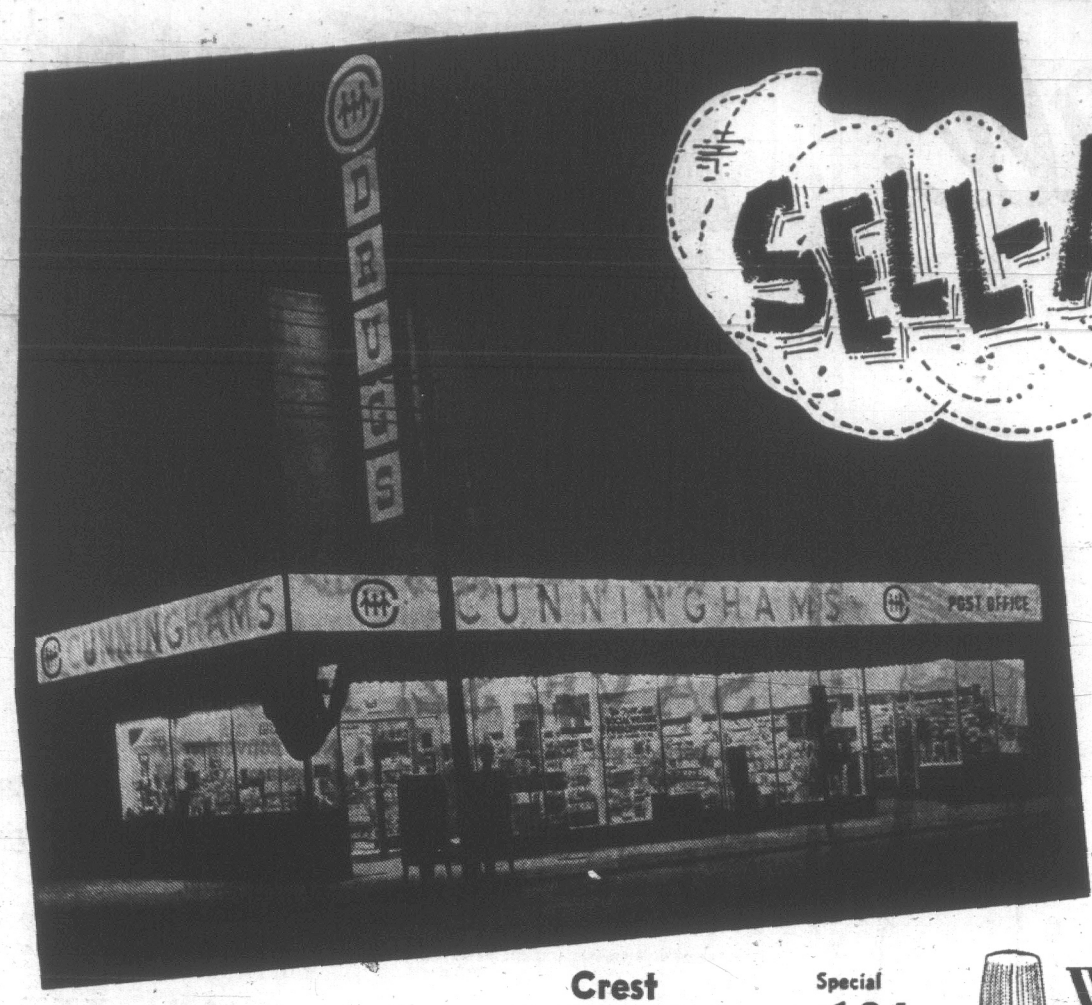

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Private industry, governments and associations have encouraged steady growth of Alberta aviation, the new chairman of the Air Transport Association of Canada said Monday. Don Watson said commercial aviation was growing at 21 per cent annually in the province and private and corporate aviation at even higher rates.

AT CUNNINGHAMS WE CARE

World Eskimos To Meet

PARIS (Reuters) — An international conference convenes in northern France next week to discuss the future of the Eskimo race.

For the first time, Eskimos from Canada, Siberia, Alaska and Greenland will meet each other and discuss common problems with their administrators, international Arctic experts and businessmen from all over the world.

Prime mover behind the conference to run from Monday to Thursday and called the International Congress on Arctic Development and the Future of the Eskimo Societies, is eminent French ecologist Prof. Jean Malaurie.

"This is the fourth international congress we have organized on Nordic problems," Prof. Malaurie said, "but it is the first where the Eskimos themselves will be represented."

About 100 delegates will attend the congress, to be held at the port of Le Havre from Monday to Wednesday, then at nearby Rouen for the final day Thursday.

11 NATIONS THERE

Countries represented will include Canada, the Soviet Union, the United States, Denmark, Britain, Sweden, Finland, East and West Germany, Japan and France.

Honorary president will be Prof. Rene Cassin, France's Nobel Peace Prize winner last year, while taking their turn to preside over the five sessions will be an Eskimo, a Canadian, a Russian, an American and a Dane, all yet to be chosen.

Thirty-four special reports have been prepared, with subjects ranging from the integration of Eskimo labor into industrial societies, to nature preservation and depletion of animal species in the Arctic.

Prof. Malaurie explained that the future of the Eskimo civilization, which occupies the largest area in the world after the Arab civilization, has taken on added significance since the discovery of rich oil and mineral deposits in the Arctic.

There now are 80,000 Eskimos spread around the Arctic ice cap from Siberia to Greenland, and their population is increasing at a rate of about four per cent a year.

CONSIDER FIVE THEMES

The congress will have five main themes of discussion, ranging from the rights of Eskimos in land ownership to their participation in local administrations.

"There is a growing awareness among Eskimos of their national heritage, especially in Greenland," said Prof. Malaurie.

It is the responsibility of industrialized nations benefitting from the natural wealth of the Arctic to help the native population, he said.

Prof. Malaurie, who has been making regular expeditions to the Arctic since 1948, said one of the major topics of the meeting would be a comparison of the Communist and capitalist method of dealing with the Eskimos.

The professor, who has twice visited Eskimo settlements in eastern Siberia, considers that the Soviet policy of keeping its Arctic regions populated has much to commend it.

Sewer Bylaw Goes to Ratepayers

A $2.31 million Central Saanich sewer bylaw will be submitted to ratepayers on Dec. 6, subject to the approval of the department of municipal affairs, Mayor Archibald Galbraith said Tuesday.

"All ratepayers will be entitled to a vote, but only those using the sewer system will pay for it," he said.

A report on the system was discussed by council Monday but was tabled until approved by the department of municipal affairs.

It will cost the average ratepayer about $12 a month.

There would be a charge of $8 a month on each parcel of land, plus a further $4 a month upon connection.

the municipality will also market $1,000 bonds or debentures at 9 per cent interest to pay for part of the project, the mayor said.

The proposed sewer system will serve mainly residents living in Brentwood, Saanichton, Turgoose subdivision and Mount Newton Heights.

It will have a two-stage treatment plant—the first of its kind on Southern Vancouver Island.

If approved by ratepayers, the system would be in operation by the summer of 1971, the mayor said.

Firestone STORES

You need good front tires, too for safe winter driving.

Firestone Champion Nylon
Our lowest-priced 4-ply Nylon tire.

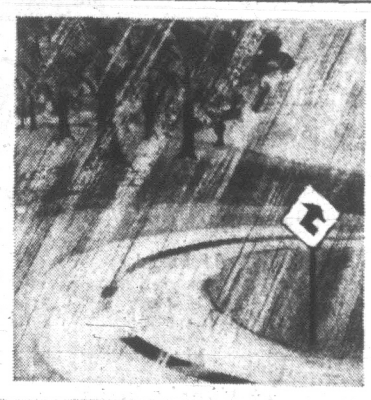

While you need a good pair of winter treads behind you to push you through snow, it's the front tires that keep your car pointed in the right direction. Worn front tires just aren't up to the job, because they tend to slide over the top of the snow. With new Firestone Champion Nylon tires, you'll have safer control of your car. Their deep tread grooves push down through snow to help your car hold on tight.

Of course, Champion Nylon tires give excellent year-round service. They're built strong, with a 4-ply Nylon casing. School Board Will Get By 'n a Pinch'

By ED GOULD

DUNCAN — School construction on an individual emergency basis during 1970 "may not be such a bad idea," Cowichan district school board vice-chairman Terry Taylor said today.

"It certainly can't be any worse than a defeated referendum," Taylor said of the announcement Tuesday that 34 provincial school referendums had been shelved.

"It came as a bit of a bombshell," Taylor said, "but if this means we can go directly to the government with our requirements rather than face a referendum and the costs entailed there, we are certainly not in a much worse position."

He said word from the Department of Education was expected this Monday on final arrangements for publishing details of the $1,470,100 referendum. When asked Tuesday what the delay was, the board was told that something important was planned.

Taylor said he is fairly certain Cowichan will get its requirements filled for the coming year "because the department of Education had already approved the referendum in its early stages."

●

He said "we certainly have the emergency."

Each year for the past 10 years Cowichan district has had between five and eight per cent increase in school population bringing it to the present 5,890 pupil total. Another 1,000 pupils are expected in three years.

Trustee Margaret Whittaker said she is shocked at the announcement but felt Cowichan district is much more fortunate than others. It had enough room that classes could be squeezed in without too much hardship.

"In a pinch I suppose we could go on shifts at some schools or utilize some other buildings such as the empty Fairbridge school or the community arena across from the high school."

The nine-room Fairbridge school was built in 1938 and stands on an estate three miles south of Duncan currently administered by the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Mrs. Whittaker said that Cowichan would certainly have an emergency situation if the planning for the next three years is left up in the air.

School board chairman Bruce Devitt was unavailable for comment. He was recently transferred to Victoria and was at a forestry training school at Whalley, B.C.

WILLISTON DEFENDS COPPER MINE EFFLUENT

Resources Minister Ray Williston said Monday effluent from a copper mine near Port Hardy will not be harmful to sea life in Rupert Inlet.

He was commenting on action by the Vancouver Island District Council of Carpenters to protest plans by Utah Mining and Construction Ltd. to dump 9,300,000 gallons of effluent daily into the inlet.

Williston said that the Pollution Control Board, which must rule on the application by the company, will make sure that effluent permitted will not be harmful to sea life.

Duncan Bingo to Aid Op-Rec Pool Fund

DUNCAN — The Fraternal Order of Eagles will hold Bingo in the Eagles Hall tonight to aid the Operation Recreation swimming pool fund.

A $300 prize is offered at the event which starts at 8 p.m., Art Moore said today.

Mr. Moore said more than $42,000 has been raised in the campaign to help build the covered community pool at Pioneer Park and this figure did not include funds raised by the home and business canvass. Receipts and pledges now are being calculated.

Moore said the Cowichan Indian Band will stage a walkathon starting at the Somenos longhouse Nov. 29. A portion of the proceeds will benefit the Op-Rec fund.

COBBLE HILL MAN SEEKS BOARD SEAT

COBBLE HILL — L. J. Gervais of Telegraph Rd. announced he would stand for election as regional board director for Area C.

The area now is represented by George Braithwaite who has said he will stand for re-election.

Gervais, a resident of the Cowichan Valley for five years, is a veteran of the Royal Canadian Air Force. He has been teaching at Shawnigan Lake School and George Bonner Junior High School.

He told a ratepayers' meeting here that he favored planning for the future of the district.

"Zoning regulations affect us all and man-handling of our environment is making people at last give some thought to proper planning."

Festivities To Welcome Ferry Service

CAMPBELL RIVER — A day of festivities at up-Island points will herald the inaugural run of the long-awaited car ferry service between Campbell River and Cortes Island.

Special committees have been set up to organize celebrations at all communities affected by the service.

Saturday will also mark the formal run of the new 30-car ferry Quadra Queen II which plies between Campbell River and Quathiaski Cove on Quadra Island.

The first 16-car ferry Quadra Queen has undergone an overhaul and will start service Saturday as Cortes Queen, between Heriot Bay on Quadra Island and Whaletown on Cortes Island.

Indians 'To Prepare Own Policy'

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Canadian Indians have rejected the federal white paper on Indian affairs and are not prepared to meet with the government until they have prepared their own policy statement, the president of the Alberta Indian Association said Tuesday.

"We cannot talk about changes in the Act until the question of Indian rights is settled," Harold Cardinal told a conference of Indian chiefs in this Interior community.

Mr. Cardinal said to discuss the paper with the government now would be to back up their belief that the Indians have accepted it.

Indians have lost confidence with the Department of Indian Affairs and no longer believe what it says, he commented.

"The Indian will not become the sacred cows of the white people. Band councillors are being honest with their people and call upon the government to do likewise."

'We Won't Deplete Fish'

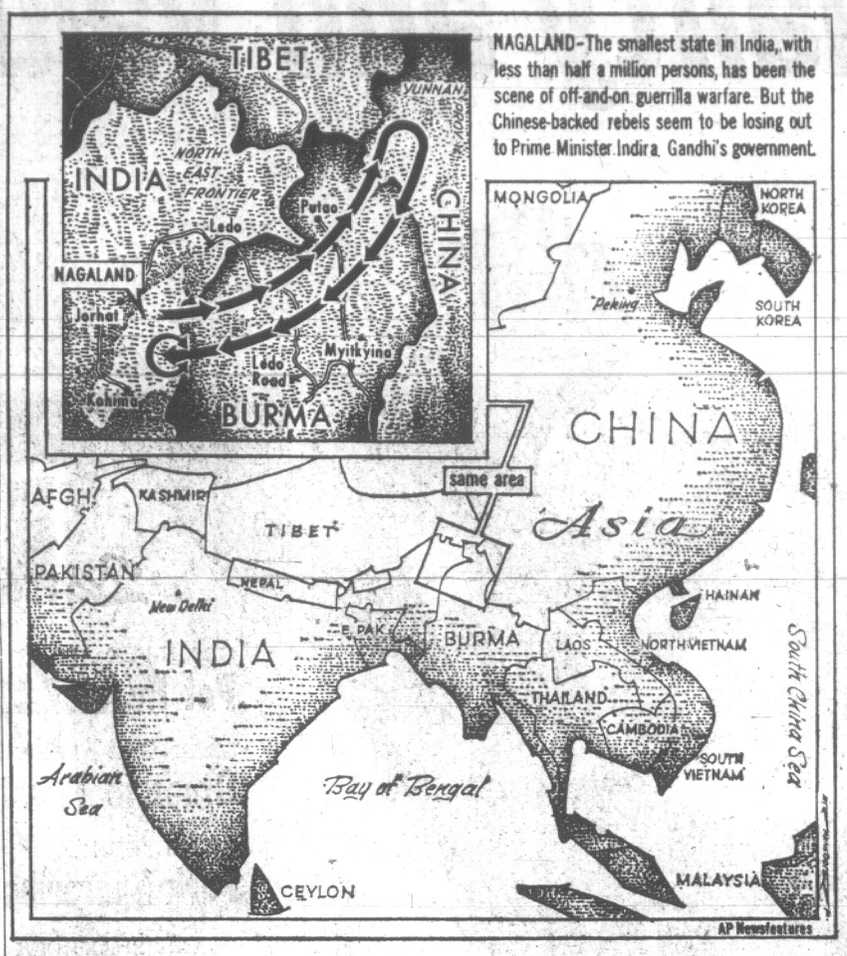

SEATTLE (AP) — A Soviet fisheries delegation has pledged that Russia will try to avoid damaging fish off the U.S. Pacific coast.

"We intend to organize our fisheries in such a way that there will not be any question of depletion of these stocks," Vladimir Lafitsky, head of the four Russians in the group, said Tuesday.

The Russians are meeting U.S. scientists for a week to consider the state of mutual fishing areas off the U.S. coast. Of primary interest are hake and perch.

GUERRILLAS ATTEMPT TO SUSTAIN REVOLT

Threat Eased in Disputed Nagaland

NAGALAND—The smallest state in India, with less than half a million persons, has been the scene of off-and-on guerrilla warfare. But the Chinese-backed rebels seem to be losing out to Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government.

By FRANK N. HAWKINS JR.

NEW DELHI (AP) — The Chinese-backed guerrilla war in India's tiny hill state of Nagaland appears to be ending with a whimper, a victim of tough army action and China's attention to problems elsewhere.

The Naga rebels, weakened by a badly split leadership, also are being undercut by fresh government efforts to bring the state into the mainstream of Indian political and economic life.

As a result, in a little over a year what seemed to be developing into a serious Peking-sponsored threat to India's northeastern frontier has become just another headache for Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's government.

●

The Nagas, religiously, racially and culturally different from the rest of India, are a Mongoloid people who, because of the densely-jungled mountains around them, remained largely isolated until the 19th century when Baptist missionairies found them.

Now about 53 per cent of Nagaland's 400,000 persons are Christian and English is the official state language.

During its colonial rule, Britain claimed the Naga area, which borders Burma, as part of its territory in Asia. In the Indian Independence Act of 1947, India was authorized to continue administering the area.

Naga leaders, feeling no kinship to largely Hindu India, felt they, too, were entitled to national sovereignty. A long and often bloody struggle began.

●

In 1960 Nagaland became the 16th Indian state under a special constitutional clause granting freedom in religious, legal and criminal matters. In effect, Nagaland became independent except for matters involving foreign matters and external defence.

The rebels, unsatisfied with the arrangement, continued hit-and-run raids against the large garrison of Indian troops in the state.

In early 1968, an estimated 1,500 Naga rebels, convinced outside help was necessary, trudged some 400 miles across the mountains of northern Burma to China's Yunnan province. There, according to official Indian sources, they spent eight months undergoing political and guerrilla warfare training. Then, armed with small arms and medicine provided by the Chinese, they headed back.

With Burmese intelligence help, most of the rebels were rounded up as they tried to cross back in. Large numbers of weapons were seized. In March, a group of about 500 was cornered and forced to surrender.

Indian government leaders breathed a noticeable sigh of relief. Stories that the backbone of the revolt was crushed began appearing in the newspapers.

Because the rebel group fared so badly and because the Chinese are now faced with more pressing problems along their Sinkiang border with the Soviet Union, the Indians feel the immediate danger from the Chinese has considerably lessened.

However, clashes continue. During August and September, there were at least 20 attacks that took 20 to 30 lives, according to reports from Kohima, the state capital.

●

Indian sources called the attacks efforts by hardline rebels to keep the violence alive and obscure Indian progess toward solving the Naga problem.

Last month, Mrs. Gandhi flew to Kohima — the first trip by an Indian prime minister into Nagaland since statehood. Officials were impressed by the warmth of her reception by some 10,000 to 15,000 persons. They said it was the largest public crowd ever to assemble in Kohima.

Mrs. Gandhi was loudly cheered when she announced a $20 million project to put up a paper and pulp manufacturing plant and a $10 million plan to build a sugar factory. The two projects will employ about 4,000 persons.

●

Her visit was marred, however, by two revel attacks near Kohima hours before she arrived. Five persons were killed and an army general was wounded.

The incidents were grim reminders that although the threat of a major rebellion was eased, peace still has not come to Nagaland.

Nagas, religiously, racially and culturally different from rest of India, resent rule of largely-Hindu state. They seek independence and have enlisted support from China.

CHECKING OIL LAMP that forms part of his steaming lights, Harry Johnson tucks down his boat Daisy for the winter.

'Life's Too Short to Worry About a Few Dollars'

By Pat Dufour

Harry Johnson is a light-hearted wanderer with a yen for travel in an unconventional manner.

He began indulging his "itchy foot" in 1963 when, at the age of 17, he headed west from his home in Kitchener, Ont. He "rode a freight because it cost nothing and hardly anyone does it any more—except in the movies."

Now he rides waves instead of rails, sometimes with as much discomfort.

He sometimes works on a surveying team when the mood and the bank balance demand.

"But life shouldn't be lived to any specifications and the spirit of freedom is the thing that really counts."

This search for freedom led him to the sea "because a boat is self-contained and will take you wherever you want to go, providing the tide lets you."

★ ★ ★

He found out recently tide is no respecter of freedom.

In his 18-foot carvel-built gaff-rigged Daisy he tried to beat the tide at Race Rocks, only to be held firmly in a whirlpool for 1½ hours.

It was only one of a series of "happenings" that Johnson has known since he set to sea in Daisy this summer. Entries in his ship's log also record when he was swept over the side, and the time he had a fire which could have proved disastrous.

"I found out my fire extinguisher didn't work. I'd got it from a marina operator on the Mainland as a swap for a 100-pound anchor I'd found. All it did was fill the place with white foam. I put the fire out with an old Bermuda sail I carry as a spare."

Daisy is no youngster—she was built in 1949—and Johnson acquired her at a bargain price.

★ ★ ★

"I found her rotting in a corner of a lot at Indian Arm. She cost me $75 and a package of cigarettes."

She's not his first boat.

He first became waterborne in Ontario at the age of 15.

"I got some planks from an old grain shed and made myself a small canoe."

Her life was short.

"A friend of mine and myself took her on the Grand River. We did fine until we reached the falls at Gault. There, she foundered and we had to hitchhike home."

He's also owned a small dinghy and a 28-foot navy cutter. The latter was of an even older vintage than Daisy.

"An old fisherman found her sunk at Port Shirley and paid the harbor master $50 for her. I drove her home 65 miles behind my old car.

The hint of winter and smallness of Daisy has driven her skipper ashore. He plans to spend the next few months in an apartment, "getting back to my painting" and giving his craft a much-needed refit.

Future plans?

Daisy may have to go. Johnson already has set his sights on a 38-foot ketch which he hopes to build with the help of a friend.

He's not worried about the financing.

"Money has a habit of coming along when you need it. Life's too short to worry about a few dollars."

American Shield Supports Saigon Territorial Gains

By PETER ARNETT

SAIGON (AP) — The American military shield around South Vietnam's population has permitted the Saigon government to make major territorial gains this year.

But only relentless use of firepower and the vigorous deployment of American troops is making this possible.

Although mauled in scores of engagements, the Communist high command has shown an uncanny ability to locate weak points in the shield.

The Saigon army still is an improving one, not a winning one, despite the injection of 750,000 M-16 rifles, doubling of the number of troops and a $1,000,000,000 program to make up deficiencies.

It is still riddled with enormous problems. A U.S. intelligence source said desertions are about 50 per cent in combat divisions and may increase now that the army is expected to spend more time in the field.

Leadership is a chronic problem only partly corrected by command courses. Graft and corruption still prevail.

ROADS OPEN

The American shield has permitted the Saigon government to make massive inroads, particularly in the 3rd Corps area around Saigon where 97 per cent of the 3,000,000-plus population is claimed to be in relatively secure areas. This term can be misleading but there is no question that more roads are open than in 1962 and refugees are moving back into the countryside.

The Communists are credited with control of about 1,000,000 people in South Vietnam, mainly in the Mekong Delta south of here.

The opening up of the countryside has mixed blessings. Tens of thousands of children in the provinces who should be in school are not because the facilities are lacking. By the end of the year at least 1,000,000 more people are expected to be under the security shield. U.S. officials say they haven't the medical services, schooling and other facilities that these people have been led to expect.

American officials in the provinces report a greater degree of interest from Saigon in the people's problems. But they still don't detect any real momentum from the central government.

"This place just couldn't survive without the U.S. shield," said Maj. Maurice Moore, U.S. senior adviser in Trang Bang district, 30 miles north-northwest of Saigon.

Like numerous other once-critical areas, the district has seen a sharp decline in Communist activity this year, and Moore finds an apparent improvement by the Saigon army and militia.

The U.S. command credits aggressive tactics with holding the North Vietnamese down to "high points" instead of the major offensives they launched in 1968 and in February this year.

But some observers argue that the Communist high command is curtailing activity on the battlefield until an American withdrawal.

A U.S. officer in Trang Bang district said: "The Viet Cong have been terribly bloodied and they may be scared. But if I was with them and kept hearing that the Americans were going to leave, then maybe I'd hold off and wait in the hope that I'd become king of the hill when they left."

Papers Filed

SALMON ARM (CP)—Councillor William A. Perry became the third candidate to enter the mayoralty race in this central British Columbia community district. He filed his papers and joined incumbent Mayor Martin Budziak and former reeve C. B. Johnstone in the campaign for the Dec. 6 municipal election.

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Take two tablespoons full a day as needed and follow the Naran Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. UVIC AWARDED TAX DECISION

A B.C. Supreme Court judge has ruled in Vancouver that one half an office building owned by the University of Victoria can't be taxed by the City of Victoria.

Chief Justice J. O. Wilson decided Monday that part of the Central Building, 620 View, which was left to the university in the McPherson Estate, is not taxable.

The Universities Act says property vested in a B.C. university is exempt from taxes.

Uvic director of development Floyd Fairclough said Tuesday the matter was taken to court by "mutual consent" of the city and the university.

"We had no hassle over it. It was just a case of we don't know, they don't know, and the only way to find was to take it to court."

The Central Building occupies two lots, and there is a legal description for each lot, Fairclough said.

The question was whether the Uvic-owned half of the building could be taxed since it is not used for university purposes.

The building's offices are occupied by a number of law, investment and real estate firms, as well as several provincial government agencies, including Welfare Minister Phil Gaglardi's Provincial Alliance of Businessmen.

SOME SCHOOLS TO CHANGE NAMES

The names of several Greater Victoria schools are confusing because they have almost the same names.

District school superintendent A. J. Longmore told trustees at a school board meeting Monday they will have to change the names of at least two schools in 1970, when Mount Douglas senior becomes a junior secondary school, and Gordon Head junior becomes a senior secondary school.

Board policy in recent years has been to name new schools after the street they border. But difficulties arise when there is more than one school on any one street: Gordon Head junior, and Gordon Head elementary.

Shelbourne elementary, an exception, is not on Shelbourne — it's on Gordon Head Road. And Arbutus elementary, now under construction, is actually on a dead-end street called Edgelow Road.

Older senior secondary schools were named after the municipalities they serve, like Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Victoria.

It comes as no surprise that mailmen and newcomers to Victoria often confuse Oak Bay senior with Oak Bay junior, and the same for Esquimalt.

Only five schools are named after persons: S. J. Willis, Frank Hobbs, Margaret Jenkins, George Jay and Sir James Douglas.

Second Offence, 21 Days in Jail

A man convicted of impaired driving for the second time in three years was jailed for 21 days Tuesday.

Larry Mitchell, 22, of 1908 Shakespeare had pleaded not guilty but gave no evidence and called no witnesses at his trial.

Court was told his car was stopped by police early Oct. 21 after it was seen to drive through a red traffic light at Douglas and Pandora.

Mitchell admitted to a similar conviction in June of 1966.

Mrs. Marie Langow, 36, of 500 Rithet, was jailed seven days for intoxicated driving and also had her driving licence suspended.

Her car was spotted driving erratically on Douglas Sept. 25.

DOUBLE PENALTY

A youth who was seen driving two consecutive days while his right to obtain a licence was under suspension received a double penalty.

Gary Swinimer, 21, of 1026 Pemberton, was handed a $100 fine for the first offence and a seven-day jail term for the second.

Court was told the offences took place on Fort Street Sunday and Estevan Monday.

William Hemingsen, 53, of 3380 Ripon was fined $350 and had his licence suspended for four months when convicted of impaired driving.

The charge arose from an incident Sept. 30 when the accused's car ran off the road and into Pioneer Square.

In another recent traffic court case, Garnet Irwin, 43, 4335 Ridgewood Cres. was fined $350 and had his driving licence suspended for impaired driving.

The charge followed a police investigation when Irwin's car ran off Glanford near McKenzie Oct. 22.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

COSTARS of The Governor and J. J. (Tuesdays at 9:30 on Channel 7) Julie Sommars and Dan Dailey are shown in a scene from a coming episode. The popular comedy half-hour is one of CBS television's better offerings this season.

MOVIE TO WATCH IS Cat Ballou, 9, Channel 4. Very funny, offbeat western yarn with a magnificent comedy performance by Lee Marvin as a grizzly, has-been gunslinger, who is called back into duty to do away with a look-alike villain. Marvin's Oscar-winning portrayal is the major interest of the film, but Jane Fonda in the title role and a gag-filled screenplay also deserves some of the credit.

★ ★ ★

THE FLIGHT OF APOLLO 12. All three networks will cover the second moon walk in a special program beginning at 9:30 p.m. approximately. They will return to the air at 6:20 a.m. Thursday to cover the scheduled liftoff of the lunar module, and again at 10 a.m. for live coverage of the docking of the lunar module and command module flying in lunar orbit.

★ ★ ★

GLEN CAMPBELL HOUR, 7:30, Channel 7. Bob Newhart, Cher, and songwriter Neil Diamond fill the bill with Glen. Newhart talks about catering to the Pilgrims, does a monologue on a small-town dial-a-service operator, and plays dad meeting daughter's young man in a sketch with Glen and Cher. In the music department, Cher and Glen try "All I Really Want to Do," and Neil Diamond joins them both for a finale of his creations like "Solitary Man" and "Kentucky Woman".

MEDICAL CENTRE, 9, Channels 7, 12. Doctors are at each other's throats again. Fighter Joe Gannon is disturbed by the return of a famous surgeon who, in his opinion, is too quick with the knife. War between the two simmers for a while and then breaks into a major flareup over the operation on an ulcer patient. Chad Everett's opponent is leathery John Marley, and their duels create most of the interest. Overlooked in most episodes, James Daly asserts his authority as boss in a key scene by dressing down both medics, and he'll draw cheers.

MUSIC HALL, 9, Channel 5. "The Sound of Burt Bacharach." An absolute delight from downbeat to finale. The very talented and highly personable composer, Burt Bacharach, is given an hour to spotlight his many song hits, and pay tribute to his favorite composer, Harold Arlen. Assisting him in the engaging musical feast are the incomparable Lena Horne, the popular Tony Bennett, and the thrilling ballet dancer Edward Villella. A highlight of the show is a rehearsal session with Bacharach putting the finishing touches on the title tune of his Broadway hit, "Promises, Promises," intercut with the artistry of Mr. Villella in a solo dance. The Arlen medley comes near the end and it's great, with Lena Horne taking command and sparking both Burt and Tony Bennett.

BOOK BEAT, 8:30, Channel 9, deals with the international armament trade as seen by George Thayer, author of "The War Business." Thayer offers insights into the psychology, ideology, sociology and economy of the trading game.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

7:30: Channel 8: To Be Announced.

9:00: Channel 4: Cat Ballou (1965 comedy). Lee Marvin, Jane Fonda, Michael Callan.

1:05: Channel 5: Johnny Allegro (1949 drama). George Raft.

1:30: Channel 7: Has Anybody Seen My Gal? (1952 musical). Piper Laurie, Rock Hudson.

1:30: Channel 13: The Return of Wildfire (1948 western). Richard Arlen, Patricia Morrison.

A GOOD DEAL ON A BOAT OR A GOOD BOAT DEALER

There are places where you can get such a "terrific deal" on a boat that you've got no comeback. Especially when you need to come back. Face it, no boat is flawless. So you need a come-back with a good dealer. One who sees that you get the right boat running right when you get it. One who'll help you keep it running right for years. Without copping out.

Are we good dealers?

Would Bertram let us handle Bertrams if we weren't?

UNDER ANTI-RIOT ACT

March Chiefs Probed

By PAUL W. VALENTINE

WASHINGTON (WP) — The justice department has launched an investigation to determine if any leaders of last weekend's anti-war demonstrations here should be prosecuted under the new federal Anti-Riot Act.

Deputy attorney-general Richard Kleindienst told a press conference that "some" of the top policymakers of the New Mobilization Committee to End The War in Vietnam — sponsor of the mass March Saturday — are already under investigation.

●

"I don't want to mention names," he said, "but any time you have persons crossing state lines to cause violence, the justice department has the duty to investigate (such action) under the anti-riot statute."

Sporadic violence, including a window-smashing rampage against the justice department building Saturday by a few militant demonstrators, triggered the investigation, he said.

Windows were smashed in at least 76 nuildings in downtown Washington during the weekend by roving bands of militants. Other minor vandalism occurred. Police using tear gas arrested about 150 persons, most for disorderly conduct.

●

He acknowledged that "98.65 per cent" of the 250,000 demonstrators during the weekend were peaceful, "but the others came here with premeditation" to be violent.

"The steering committee of the new mobilization was aware this was going to happen and did nothing to stop it," Kleindienst charged.

New mobilization leaders, who claimed they took extensive measures to head off violence, including private "cool it" talks with militant groups and the deployment of more than 2,500 march marshals for crowd control, reacted with disbelief Tuesday.

"It's difficult to understand how bringing large numbers of people into Washington to demonstrate peacefully in a march and rally is in violation of the anti-riot statute," said spokesman Ted Johnson.

"The justice department was unable to limit our demonstration beforehand and now seems intent on diminishing its effect after the fact."

●

The anti-riot measure, part of the 1968 Civil Rights Act, is the same one under which the "Chicago 8" are currently being tried in connection with their activities during violent demonstrations at the Democractic national convention last year.

The act makes it a felony to cross state lines with intent to incite, organize or participate in a riot. Maximum penalty is five years' imprisonment and a $10,000 fine.

Civil Servant Total Steady But Salary Rise Continues

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of federal civil servants is being held at the present level or slightly reduced but salary increases are still driving up the costs of the public service.

Of the $67,000,000 additional spending estimates presented in the Commons Tuesday by the government, $40,000,000 is for pay increases for civil servants.

Total government spending for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1970, now is estimated at $11,924,000,000 with further supplementary estimates still to come.

Spending on Indian and Eskimo affairs will increase by more than $12,000,000 to $289,000,000.

Expansion of the bilingualism development program by the state secretary's department will cost $1,835,000.

The Canadian livestock feed board gets $1,000,000 for freight assistance on grain storage costs.

Food aid is increased by $13,745,000 but there is no ddditional expense because the money will come out of other and diminished programs.

A sum of $930,000 is provided for a Canadian police information centre in Ottawa.

Number of Prime Minister Trudeau's staff has been frozen at the present level of 46 after a recent increase of four.

The Senate gets an additional $760,000 for "information, utilities, materials and supplies and all other expenditures."

New loans, investments and advances include:

Canada's subscription as a member of the Caribbean regional development bank, $10,760,000.

Loans for the expansion of small businesses in the Yukon and Northwest Territories, $10,000,000.

Loans to Indians, $2,400,000.

Loan to Nova Scotia for construction of an end-loading ramp at Yarmouth, $430,000.

Mines Body Protests Tax Change Proposals

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia and Yukon Chamber of Mines said today that Ottawa's tax change proposals could lead to "a serious decline in domestic and foreign investment in mining."

In a telegram to Revenue Minister Edgar Benson, the chamber said it is vital that Ottawa continue to encourage mining and exploration, as it has in the past.

"Tax incentives suggested in the white paper would not appear to be adequate," the telegram said, referring to the federal government's white paper on taxation, released earlier this month.

It said the proposal to end gradually the three-year tax holiday for new mines would reduce incentives—and so would changes the white paper proposes for mining depletion allowances.

In addition, the chamber opposes Ottawa's idea that the capital gains of prospectors should be taxed. It says the proposal will mean fewer prospectors, and therefore fewer new mines.

This, it says, will lead to "a reduction in the gross national product, taxation revenues and the standard of living of all Canadians."

The chamber says that in the B.C.-Yukon area, most of the potential fork mining growth is in large deposits of low-grade ore. Favorable tax laws are needed if these are to be developed.

"The economy of Western Canada, including northern regions, is to a great extent dependent upon basic resource development . . . if mining is depressed, we in the west have nothing to replace it."

Court Told Overtime Needless

VANCOUVER (CP)—By urging British Columbia mill workers to refuse to work beyond regular hours the International Woodworkers of America union is hoping to eliminate "needless" overtime, Alex Macdonald, New Democratic Party MLA for Vancouver East, said in Supreme Court Tuesday.

The Vancouver lawyer, appearing for the IWA, told Mr. Justice Dryer—in an injunction quest by three major B.C. forest firms—that the reason for the action is not to force the firms to re-open the current labor contract.

MacMillan Bloedel, Rayonier and Weldwood, who operate six mills in Vancouver and Port Alberni are seeking the injunction that would require the union to end its overtime ban.

The companies say the workers' refusal to work overtime has caused a serious cutback in production.

They allege the real reason for the union's action is a desire to get the contract re-opened for new wage talks. The contract does not expire until next June.

An estimated 3,000 workers are involved in the injunction application. The case is continuing.

Spy Police Abolished

LISBON (Reuters) — Premier Marcello Caetano today took a major step toward a more relaxed political atmosphere in Portugal by abolishing the internal and external security police.

The move came unexpectedly. Its announcement was buried in the middle of a communique on decisions taken at a cabinet meeting.

It said merely that a new directorate-general for security had been formed at the interior ministry and would immediately take over the functions of the security police force which, the communique said, is abolished.

Abolition of the force could mean greater freedom for the individual in Portugal, a greater liberalization—within certain limits—in the political sphere and a more popular image for Caetano's government.

Amphetamines Ban Urged In U.S. Crime Hearings

WASHINGTON (WP) — Two doctors told a congressional committee Tuesday that the manufacture and sale of amphetamines should be banned because their medical uses are limited.

The drugs are used mainly by thrill seekers to provide highs or in weight reduction programs where they are practically useless, the doctors told the House Select Committee on Crime.

The committee chairman, Rep. Claude Pepper (D-Fla.), raised the question of banning amphetamines, a drug that accounts for 8 per cent of all prescriptions written in the country.

"I can see no use for amphetamines. I would be in favor of banning them completely," said Dr. Benjamin J. Sheppard, a doctor and lawyer from Miami.

His view was backed by Dr. John D. Griffith, a psychiatrist and pharmacologist at Vanderbilt University School of Medicine, Nashville, Tenn.

"There is no place for these drugs," he said. "It is the consensus of the world scientific literature that the amphetamines are of very little benefit to mankind; they are, however, quite toxic."

Although 8 billion to 10 billion amphetamine pills are produced in America each year, Dr. Sidney Cohen of the National Institute of Mental Health estimated that "several thousand" of them would take care of the nation's legitimate medical needs.

The American Medical Association lists eight uses for amphetamines, but says only two of them are free from medical controversy. These two are for the treatment of narcolepsy, a rare sleeping sickness, and hyperkinetic behavior in children.

Other uses are for overweight, mild depression, fatigue, to stimulate patients who have taken depressant drugs such as barbiturates, help pain killing drugs work better and counteract sleepiness in people who have to remain awake for long periods.

Committee investigators have mine pills manufactured fall into illicit hands.

Alberni Valley Teachers Agree To Pay Increase

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Alberni Valley school board and teachers reached a 1970 salary settlement Monday for an 8.2 per cent average increase.

This raised the number of agreements to seven, covering about 8 per cent of British Columbia's 19,000 teachers. Others settled are Howe Sound, Smithers, Vanderhoof, Prince George, Nanaimo and Fort Nelson.

Another 19 districts have completed "piggyback" agreements, which are dependent on the settlements in neighboring areas.

This leaves 50 definitely going into arbitration, and about nine still holding voluntary negotiations.

Ladysmith Expects Boom

LADYSMITH — A $1,000,000 building boom is expected here in 1970 with final approval expected this week from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation for a 100-lot subdivision at Holland Creek Park.

Building permits issued to the end of October this year were $656,028.

Town council already has agreed to sell three of the view lots on the north side of Davis Road to Nanaimo Framing Ltd. on the condition that houses be built on them within three years.

Pollution Study Will Pack Punch

A federal scientific task force is completing studies for a broad program that will pack a powerful punch into pollution controls intended to protect the West Coast fisheries.

"We're just working on our final draft of recommendations to be submitted to the minister," Dr. Michael Waldichuk, a leading Canadian oceanographer, said here Tuesday.

Waldichuk—who provided the oceanographic data in the Greater Victoria sewerage study and strongly advocated inclusion of treatment plants—is official host of the Canadian Committee on Oceanography's annual meeting this week in the Empress Hotel.

His papers have been read at major international conferences on pollution control but he is better known on this coast as head oceanographer at the fisheries research station in Nanaimo. Recently he was picked for the key post of secretary to CCO, which coordinates most oceanographic activites in Canada by government departments, universities and industrial research teams.

BROAD STUDY

Waldichuk told a reporter the current West Coast study will have far-reaching ramifications.

"We'll be basically concerned with the biological aspects of pollution, that is, the effects of industry and sewage on aquatic resources," he said.

Measures to neutralize the harmful effects of pulp mill effluents will be high on the list but he warned the solutions will not be cheap.

"The pulp industry which now spends $40 million a year for pollution control, soon will be spending $250 million a year and, in the end, the consumer will have to pay for it," said Waldichuk.

He pointed out the threat from pulp mill effluent is growing because of the constantly expanding volume.

DEMAND TO GROW

"There is a high demand for forest products now and it is going to grow even higher, so we must be concerned with pulp mill effluents.

"Vancouver Island has six pulp mills and all of it borders fisheries waters."

He said the high cost of controls demands that they be efficient and effective and contended that any soundly based company will be able to live with the financial requirements.

Dr. Waldichuk indicated the study is more thorough-going than any before it.

"One thing we will be studying is the sub-lethal effects pulp mill effluent has on salmon," he said.

"We know that a certain level will kill the salmon, but a sub-lethal effect could equally ruin a salmon run."

SEE ONTARIO

He said an example of this situation already exists in Lake Erie where pollution has transformed the fish population in a detrimental manner as commercially desirable fish have been replaced by the hardier coarse fish such as carp.

Dr. Waldichuk said basic research in the sea does not have the same appeal as basic research in space so oceanography has been hampered by lack of money.

But he predicted current fiscal restrictions will give way to a rapid acceleration of oceanographic study in Canada, particularly on specific aspects, and a federal marine sciences centre will be established somewhere on the B.C. coast in the next decade, matching the facilities of the Bedford Institute in Nova Scotia.

Girls' Hostel To Open Dec. 2

Victoria Girls Hostel, in the works for more than a year, will officially open Dec. 2.

Mrs. John A. Di Castri, spokesman for the non-demoninational group responsible for the organization of the hostel, said Mayor Hugh Stephen has agreed to participate in the opening ceremonies.

It was Mayor Stephen who first suggested the need for a hostel in the community.

Designed to provide living accommodation and meals for up to 14 girls seeking employment in the city, the hostel, an older home on Fernwood, has been completely renovated by construction and allied industries.

Management provided the materials required for the revamp job while labor donated time and skills.

In addition to Stephen the opening will be attended by dignitaries from other municipalities, the provincial and federal governments and the construction industry.

Be Sure to Provide Drainage

By HILDA BEASTALL

Trees and shrubs which lose their leaves in fall can be moved most successfully after leaf fall, since any time is planting time here for these between October and March. As usual, there are exceptions. For planting, the soil must not be frozen solid, nor must it be wet and sticky, in lumps. If it is possible that your deciduous (meaning leaf-losing) trees, or shrubs, will not be delivered to you just at the moment when you want to plant, its a good idea to prepare the holes for them as early as you can do the work.

Hilda

By writing the name on a stake at each hole, this preparation serves two purposes. First, it eliminates delay in choosing the exact site at planting time, since this is a matter requiring a great deal of consideration.

Secondly, the heap of soil taken from the hole can be covered with a piece of plastic sheeting or even a heavy sack to keep it from becoming wetter than it is. The hole can also have a plank or plastic sheet covering it.

By keeping the mound of soil free from additional moisture, it can readily be mixed with dampened peat moss or seaforest bark or sand according to the needs of your plant, also it will work easily around and between the roots

Should you discover water seeping into the hole, you will know drainage is poor at that spot. You must either dig an outlet, or you must break up the clay or soil at the bottom enough to prevent retention of water in the winter.

Since this condition indicates that water lies in the general area, put in a few inches of coarse gravel and some chopped up grass turves.

All this helps drainage around the roots, keeping them from being drowned. The roots will instead tend to move in a sideways direction; yet the moisture below them can be a lifesaver in summer drought.

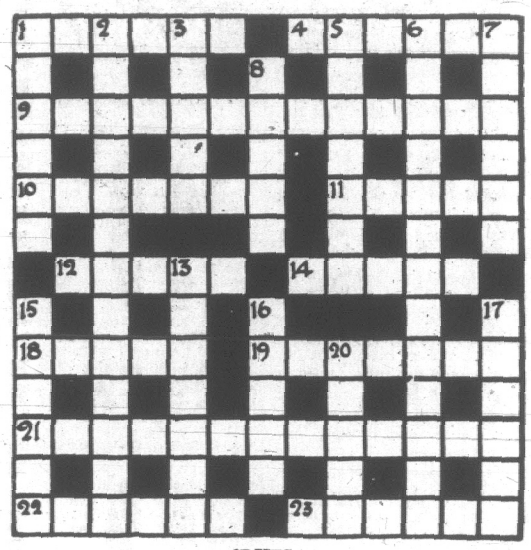

Hole preparation now while top soil is in just about perfect condition repays in time saved, and in gaining some knowledge of what goes on beneath your top soil.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Three Tall Men Did Heroic Jobs

By BOB BOWMAN

One of the most glamorous figures in early French-Canada was the Marquis de Tracy who was appointed lieutenant-governor on Nov. 19, 1663, although he did not arrive at Quebec until June, 1665, when he brought the Carignan-Saliere Regiment to crush the Iroquois.

He was one of the three tall men who did heroic jobs for France in Canada. The others were priests: Fathers Brebeuf and de Casson. The Marquis de Tracy could ride around Quebec on a white horse strong enough to carry his great weight, but the two priests had to walk, although they were just as tall, they were not as heavy.

Father Brebeuf, however, was in Canada long before de Tracy, and was massacred by the Iroquois when they attacked the mission of St. Louis in 1649.

Father Dollier de Casson actually served with de Tracy after landing at Quebec under the assumed name of Monsieur Colson. De Tracy recognized him right away because Francois Dollier de Casson had once been a distinguished captain of cavalry in the French army, and was noted for his great strength as well as bravery. However, de Casson grew to hate the cruelties of war and became a priest.

When the Marquis de Tracy led the Carignan-Saliere Regiment against the Iroquois, Father de Casson marched with the men, not to fight but to give them spiritual comfort. However, there was an occasion when he had to use his great strength to save his life. Two "Annies," as the French called the Iroquois, crept up on him from behind, but de Casson heard them. He whirled around, grabbed one in each hand, knocked their heads together and threw them aside.

The Marquis de Tracy returned to France after the Iroquois had been defeated and promised to keep the peace, but Father de Casson stayed on and laid out one of the first streets in Montreal.

Other events on Nov. 19:

1775 — Sir Guy Carleton arrived at Quebec after getting through U.S. lines.

1794 — Lieutenant-Governor Simcoe opened Yonge Street as a portage road from Lake Ontario to Lake Simcoe.

1804 — Scottish actor Ormsby opened first theatre in Montreal.

1858 — British Columbia (the mainland) became a colony in ceremony at Fort Langley.

1866 — British Columbia and Vancouver Island were united.

1867 — British government rejected British Columbia's request to join Canada.

1869 — Hudson's Bay Company surrendered its territory in Canada for 300,000 pounds.

1918 — Government owned railroads were amalgamated as basis for CNR.

HONORED BIRD

When sea gulls devoured a horde of large black crickets that threatened to wipe out the Mormon's first grain crop in Utah in 1848, the sect was so grateful that it passed laws protecting the bird and erected a monument to it in Salt Lake City's Temple Square.

YOUR HEALTH

Some Type Cancers Grow Very Slowly

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

Sometimes I can give hope to a patient who is much upset about a diagnosis of cancer, by telling about the scale of malignancy devised by the late Dr. Broders, of the Mayo Clinic. According to Dr. Broders, there are four grades of malignancy of cancer; when the surgeon tells me that a cancer is Grade I or II, I can say that the chances are that it will grow very slowly, and the person can live many years, even if the growth comes back. Cancers graded III are more likely to grow fast, and Grade IV cancers are the most malignant and dangerous.

I just happened to run onto an article written in 1927 by Dr. Harry H. Kretsler who told of a woman of 40 who, in 1901, found a lump in her right breast. The next year, she had the tumor cut out, and for the next 14 years she had no trouble.

★ ★ ★

Then a remarkable and rare thing happened, and cancer returned in the scar of the operation. This was removed, and the woman got along well for nine years until 1924, when cancer returned in the skin of the left breast, in her lungs, and in her neck. She was then given an injection of colloidal gold, and immediately she was much better. She got up our of bed and went back to work.

Two years later, she started to go down hill, and apparently the tumor had returned somewhere in her body. She died 25 years after the tumor first appeared.

Almost certainly, if she had gone to a surgeon immediately when she found the tumor in the right breast, and had had it removed, she would have had no further trouble. Why did she live so long? Probably because the malignancy of the tumor was very low.

★ ★ ★

The other day I saw an old patient of mine whom I took care of nine years ago, when she had a cancer of the breast, and immediately had it removed surgically. She then got along all right for three years. Then some tumor came back, and again it was removed, and again she went for three years.

Now, nine years after the first appearance of the growth, she looks perfectly healthy and is a little overweight. I expect her then to stay well and live for many more years. I regret that in her case the pathologist did not tell me what the grade of her tumor's malignancy was. It may be that her body has a high degree of resistance to the growth of cancer.

I remember well a school mistress who came to me years ago complaining of pain in her left hip. She said it had come when she had bumped her hip as she hurried through a door.

On X-raying the hip I found much cancer. When I told her of this she said, "Some 14 years ago I had one of my breasts removed because of cancer, and years later I had pain in that hip. Then an X-ray examination showed cancer such as you have just found."

I had her well-treated with X-rays, and a year or two after that when I left California she was still in good health. This indicates a low grade of malignancy.

Many a time I have seen a man with cancer of the prostate gland, which could not be removed surgically, because it had already scattered. Often such a man got along well for 10 years. I have seen them go for longer than that, especially if the man was given female hormone, which tended to keep his male cancer cells from growing.

★ ★ ★

Commonly today we physicians see a person who, while sitting in his car at a stop light, had some carelessly driven automobile crash into the back of his car. This caused the patient's head to fly backward so violently that for months afterward, he or she continues to suffer much pain in the upper part of the neck.

X-ray studies commonly show nothing, which means probably that the tissues that were injured were the ligaments that hold the vertebras together. Sometimes small changes will be found in a few of the vertebras—changes that suggest injury, or the end-results of some inflammation.

This type of pain in the neck is sometimes treated with "traction." A leather sling, which goes under the jaw in front and under the back of the head behind, is fastened to a cord that runs over a pulley and to a three-pound weight. The patient sleeps with his traction on his head, and often it give relief. During the day some often will wear a plastic collar which supports the neck.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

In the deal presented today, which arose in the National Championships held earlier this year in Los Angeles, a bit of razzle-dazzle defence brought about South's defeat. Sitting West was Meyer Schleifer, West Coast bridge luminary.

Both sides vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♠.

At virtually every table South became the declarer at a three no-trump contract. Usually, the various West defenders elected to open a club, which East won with the ace, and returned a club. South now had his contracted-for nine tricks: four hearts, four diamonds and a club.

Schleifer, however, chose to lead a low spade at trick one, and South elected to play the eight-spot from dummy. East, upon winning the trick with his spade nine, played back the nine of clubs. Declarer put up his jack, which West captured with the queen.

West now made the daring lead of a low spade, away from his A-K. Declarer, little dreaming that Schleifer was underleading his A-K, played the 10 from dummy. East's jack winning. The ace of clubs was cashed next, after which a spade was returned, enabling West to cash his ace and king. Thus the defenders took the first six tricks, inflicting a two-trick set on declarer.

Actually, had our South declarer guessed correctly at either trick one, trick two, or trick three, he would have fulfilled his contract. If, at trick one, he had put up the board's queen of spades, he would have had his ninth trick.

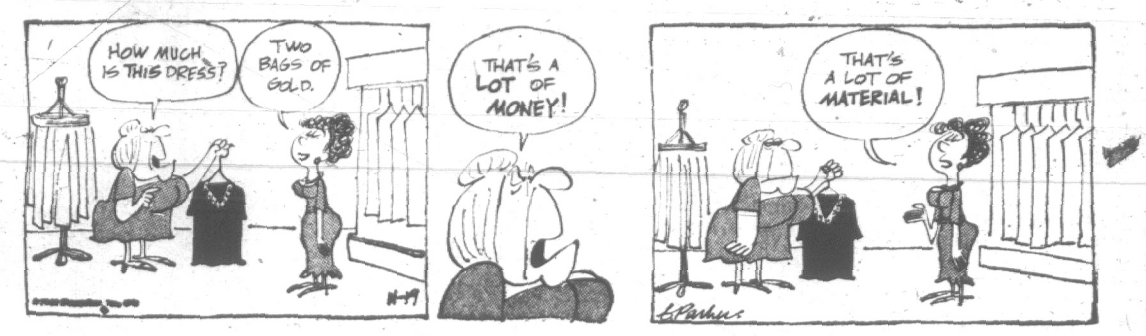

Having misguessed the winning play at trick one, he could have recovered at trick two by playing his king of clubs when East returned the club nine. But, once again, he misguessed.

South's third opportunity came at trick three, when West returned the spade four. But, again, he misguessed the true state of affairs. And, as they say in baseball, three strikes and you're out.

Indians Accept Land-Marina Project

By HUMPHRY DAVY

A $3 million land-marina development plan for the Becher Bay Indian community has been accepted in principle by Chief Jasper Charles and band councillors.

The plan prepared by Capital Region Planning Board director George Atamanenko would make the East Sooke Bay a major recreational area for South Vancouver Island.

And already wheels are turning to develop the natural resources of the area.

An engineering study to determine the cost of constructing a marina and breakwater is under way. The work is being done by Underwood & McLellan Associates.

"It's a good plan," said the chief, "but it will require either government or private capital to implement it."

He seemed confident financial assistance will be available.

●

The Atamanenko study envisages Becher Bay becoming a major centre for sailing, boating, fishing, camping, hiking and summer resort.

The basic aim of the plan is to provide the band with revenue, plus employment for some of its members.

The director's report shows the band has sufficient land and water resources to develop a major recreational centre.

It owns a total of 908 acres which has about five miles of shoreline. This does not include several islands owned by the band.

The value of the waterfront alone is estimated at $1,600,000.

The reserve is divided into two blocks. The first consisting of 673 acres is at the head of the bay. The remaining 235 acres are located on the east shore.

●

The band has 83 members, but 20 per cent live away from Becher Bay. Half the membership is under 16.

In his study, Atamanenko urges construction of new homes on new sites to relieve overcrowding, plus a community centre.

Overcrowding is a growing problem. There are 15 people living in one home with an area of 960 square feet. it has no basement.

His major revenue producing project to assist the band is development of a marina which would require the construction of a breakwater.

An alternative would be a dry-land type of marina where the expensive building of a breakwater and dredging of the bay would not be necessary.

Other suggestions include:

● Development of 35 acres of reserve land as a marina-campsite and picnic area.

● Leasing acres for summer homes. The property would be divided into one acre lots.

● Leasing 93 acres, including 43 acres of waterfront for permanent home sites. The lots would be two acres.

● Development of a small park for tourists.

Atamanenko also suggests that some of the rocky, sloping highland on the reserve be used for tree cover and sheep ranching, and a small rifle range on the reserve be leased.

He estimates that if the band developed these resources their annual gross income in 10 years would be about $70,000 annually.

●

This excludes revenue received from the marina. Income from this source would depend on its size and services.

"The suggestions would assist all the people of the Indian community to a fuller standard of living, such as the majority of Canadian people tend to enjoy and accept as part of everyday living," he said.

"But in order to carry out the programs, the support of the federal and provincial governments and other public and private agencies will be required," he added.

Fears that the proposed development of marina facilities at Becher Bay would conflict with existing marinas on south Vancouver Island, are not shared by the director.

●

The regional population is expanding so rapidly, he said, that additional recreational facilities will be required soon.

The Langford - Colwood-Metchosin area alone will have a population of 26,000 by 1981, he said.

OCEANOGRAPHERS MEET AT NADEN

Delegates to meetings of the Canadian Committee on Oceanography and their wives were guests at a cocktail party in the Canadian Forces Base officers' mess, Esquimalt, Tuesday evening. Guests included Mr. and Mrs. P. W. Nasmyth, Victoria, and Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Barber, of Ottawa. The object of their attention is a compass binnacle, converted to a mailbox, a conversation piece in the entrance hall of the wardroom. (Photo by Ian McKain.)

Police Need Court Co-Operation

The police in Canada do not get enough support from the law courts, a former superintendent in the Royal Canadian Mounted Police contended Tuesday.

William George Fraser told more than 500 Victoria members of the Women's Canadian Club that organized crime could be stamped out if the courts would co-operate with "firm, impartial" police work.

"But you can't legislate sentimentality. We place men in those positions (of judge and jury) and they must be thoroughly convinced before they will convict a man," he said.

"We've had the jury since the Black Plague. We got rid of the bubonic plague but we still have the jury."

CAN'T COMPLAIN

Fraser, formerly superintendent of the Yukon and North West Territories and acting head of Newfoundland RCMP crime detection, said police aren't allowed to complain but "have to live with it."

Fraser outlined the growth of the Mafia and the Cosa Nostra, two major crime syndicates on the North American continent, and said they collect $20 billion a year from their U.S. businesses.

The police know the Mafia is in Canada, he said.

They can pinpoint a small city where car-wash businesses are controlled by the syndicate, areas where dry-cleaning firms are supported by crime and cities where narcotics are a problem.

"We must prosecute ruthlessly the marijuana pusher. We must stop it," he said.

"We must prosecute ruthlessly the gaming-house operator, the bookie on the street, the lottery pedlar.

"Every time you buy a ticket on a lottery you are supporting organized crime."

Fraser urged that police officers be required to have more education to combat crime, which has moved into the white collar segment of society.

"White collar crimes of fraud or finance require real experts to solve them just as it takes an educated man to perpetrate them."

He also suggested more respect from the public would increase the efficiency of the police forces.

Executive Monkeys Show Hypertension

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— For decades researchers have sought the exact relationship between high blood pressure and a nagging spouse.

Everybody knows a nasty event can shoot the pressure up, but it's not known if prolonged unpleasant situations, such as those created by the nagging spouse, can cause hypertension.

Now Dr. Ralph P. Forsyth of the University of California Medical Centre has found five or six months of stress can produce dramatic increases in the blood pressure of monkeys.

Forsyth employed the "executive monkey" technique in which the executive works by pushing a bar at regular intervals to avoid an electric shock.

The stress comes from the executive's knowledge that stopping the shocks is his responsibility. Non-executive monkeys, who are given mild shocks at random but have no bar to push, do not develop significant blood pressure changes.

Previous experiments elsewhere have shown stress also can produce ulcers and hormonal changes in executive monkeys. But Forsyth says what's true in monkeys is not necessarily true of humans.

No conclusive proof has been discovered that psychological and social stresses cause sustained hypertension in humans, according to Dr. Maurice Sokolow of the medical centre.

What Sokolow does know for sure, however, is once a person has hypertension, his disease will be markedly influenced by psychological and social factors.

In many cases, the stress of a patient's visit to the doctor's office inspires elevated pressures not present at any other time — a circumstance making wrong diagnoses easy.

The University of California gives patients portometers, semi-automatic devices, allowing them for a couple of days to take their own blood pressures every half hour, at home and on the job.

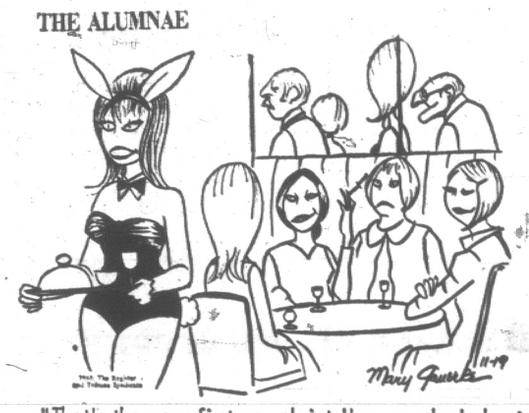

In some the pressure shoots up at work and in others at home. Some others are most relaxed when most excited.

The trick is to find the situations which the patient "doesn't like." These situations can then be shunned, or a patient can be helped to develop new psychological attitudes, so pressure peaks can be avoided.

About 60 per cent of hypertension and cardiac patients at the university clinic have psychological or social problems requiring special care.

Now at 10 San Francisco area hospitals physicians dealing with these patients have the help of special teams consisting of a social worker, a public health nurse and a psychologist.

Spikey Wire Saw Fits Into Pocket

By PENNY SAVER

"The sap is falling," announced Gladys' husband as he sat down to his Saturday brunch. "Make me a hearty meal, woman, as I have a hard day ahead."

"What," she asked, her pancake flipper frozen with surprise, "does the sap have to do with you?"

"Everything, all. Once the sap has well and truly fallen I can prune the trees. Can't prune a sappy tree, you know, it might bleed to death."

"I will prepare the first aid kit," was the only reply.

Last year Gladys' husband fell out of the apple tree while trying to remove a particularly awkward branch. This year she waited, breathlessly, for the sound of crunching limbs (his and the tree's) and at last, unable to stand the tension, went out to watch.

"Penny, you wouldn't believe the saw he was using. I almost didn't. It looked more like a miniature clothesline than anything else.

"The blade is about 18 inches long and is nothing more nor less than a spikey steel wire. At each end is a little ring. All he did was stretch it tight and begin to saw. It was perfect for the little nitches between branches that are too small for an ordinary blade."

We discovered later that this little saw was designed for the outdoors man who might find himself needing to saw wood for the fire. It won't bend without snapping but it does roll into quite a small space and can easily be stored in a knapsack or even a pocket—provided the material is tough (or the saw is shielded).

It will also saw through hard plastics, so is just the thing for model-makers.

Made in West Germany, this little saw sells for $1.25.

When a travelling salesman friend of ours passed through town, I was impressed by the number of suits he had managed to hang on the little hooks built into the sides of his car.

"What you need is some proper hooks," I said.

Hooks for hanging clothes on a long journey are ridiculously easy to install. Made of a tough plastic, they fit over the edge of the window and are held firmly in place when the window is shut.

A package of two is 59 cents and they come in red, blue and yellow.

The other day I found a magnetic ashtray for $1.29. It isn't large, but it will perch on any steel surface (on a filing cabinet, perhaps, or in a car) where a regular ashtray won't sit.

Please call 382-3131 between 9 a.m. and 4 p.m. for information on where to find these items.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Sex Scheduled

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: If you can't answer this, please don't tell me to talk to my minister or doctor because I couldn't face them with this problem.

Putting it bluntly, ever since we have been married (it's going on 9 years) my husband will have relations with me only on Saturday. Monday, I can just forget it. Also, if I am dead tired or not in the mood on Saturday, that doesn't make any difference to him.

Outside of this one fault, he is a good husband and a better than average father to our four children, so maybe I shouldn't complain. But I want to know if this is normal in a man, or is there something wrong with him? —Saturday Night Wife.

DEAR WIFE: One of the things that is wrong with your husband is his bull-headedness. Also, if he puts marital relations on a time schedule, he doesn't know the first thing about how to please a woman—or himself for that matter. And if he isn't willing to learn, shame on him. My condolences.

DEAR ABBY: I own and operate a small but up-to-date neighborhood grocery store and here is my problem. We deliver, but there is one customer who comes into the store at least twice a day to buy one or maybe two items. Then she helps herself to the largest shopping bag we have. These bags cost me five cents each.

The delivery boy tells me that this lady has more shopping bags in her house than we have in our store.

This isn't going to make or break me, but it is very irritating. Is there some way I can put a stop to this without appearing petty?—New Jersey Grocer.

DEAR GROCER: No. But since it will neither make nor break you, I advise you to charge it off to the cost of doing business and forget it. An ulcer is far more irritating and infinitely more expensive.

DEAR ABBY: I have a husband who saves, collects, and stores all kinds of things—large and small. Where does he store them? Right in the living room, bedroom, and hallways. We literally live in a warehouse.

Everywhere you look, things are packed and piled in boxes. You wonder if we just moved in and haven't unpacked yet, or we are moving out.

If I put up a shelf for my things, right away he loads it down with his. I once moved some of his boxes down in the basement with the help of a friend and the roof came off. That can't happen again because there's no more room down there.

I think it's like a disease with him. No woman can cure him either. I am his third wife. Now I know why the others left him.

There is no place to sit. He has the couch all covered with stuff, and same for the dining room chairs. He could live his whole life sitting on a kitchen chair.

He has an oil drum in the living room and a drill press in the bedroom. Don't ask me why he's saving them.

As it is, I practically live in the car and try to get my work done in this warehouse.

If there is another wife who has solved this problem outside of divorce, I wish she would write in. Thank you, too, Abby, for listening.—Very truly yours, Going Crazy.

DEAR GOING: You don't say how long you have lived with this pack rat, but from your letter I would say your squirrelly husband is about to strike out for the third time.

New Shorthand Developed

MONTREAL (CP) — Mrs. D. Scott Macnab has devised a new system of shorthand and calls it Hermes because "he was the fastest of the Greek gods."

She claims the shorthand can be learned in 4½ weeks, though most of her students take eight weeks, studying one hour daily.

Mrs. Macnab is director of a language academy in Durban, South Africa, but is spending a year in Montreal while her husband serves as visiting professor in McGill University's department of foreign law.

She began the school when she moved to Durban and realized the necessity of learning Afrikaans. Although a law was passed in 1923 requiring everyone who held a South African government job to be bilingual, it did not become effective in Durban until 30 years later.

While hoping to teach Hermes in Montreal, Mrs. Macnab says interested persons can learn it on their own, using her textbooks and the dictionary.

Her students, who number between 7,000 and 8,000 in South Africa, have achieved an average speed of 100 to 120 words a minute and "the slowest can do 80."

Mrs. Macnab says "there are no exceptions to the rules." Where possible, she has used letters of the alphabet and common mathematical and scientific symbols, such as the angle, triangle and degree sign.

Although she personally has never studied any other shorthand system, she says "as far as I can judge, mine is uniquely my own."

KNIT AND CHAT — By MAY MAC LEAN

Scarf Instructions Repeated

Last week's mail brought several requests for the knitted scarf instructions I wrote about a couple of months ago. Two or three readers mentioned that they would like to knit scarves as Christmas gifts. As this pattern only has one row of instructions, it can be picked up and left, putting all those odd moments to good use.

These bedsocks can double as travelling slippers.

If you are contemplating knitting a scarf, I suggest you cut out these instructions now.

Number twelve needles and three-ply wool were suggested. It will depend upon the wool you use; for instance, for double knitting wool you might use No. 7 needles, and, of course, fewer stitches.

However, the pattern I gave called for No. 12 needles, three-ply wool and 73 stitches cast on. The pattern stitch is made by knitting two stitches, then purling two stitches across the row, until one stitch remains. Knit this last stitch. Repeat this same row until the scarf is the desired length, then cast off.

Each end can be finished with a short fringe, made by cutting four-inch lengths from the remaining wool. To do this easily, wind the wool around a cardboard two inches wide. Cut along one side of the cardboard, so you have lengths of four inches of wool.

Taking two pieces of wool at a time, fold the pieces in half, then using a crochet hook, insert along the cast-on edge, pull the loop through about half an inch, pass the ends through the loop, and pull tight. Work all along the cast-on and cast-off edges.

This scarf does not need to be folded when worn, and you'll find that it lies flat.

For those of you who have enquired about instructions for a French-Canadian stocking cap, I have one for girls and boys on Leaflets No. 6830.

If you are thinking of making toys, there is Katie the Kangaroo on Leaflet No. 6823, which also has instructions for a crochet clown.

Leaflet No. 6822, has instructions for both Dulcie the Duck and Pepi the Poodle.

Bedsocks knitted in a pastel colour, will make a lovely gift for someone special, and can double as travelling slippers. One slipper can be knitted in an evening.

To order Leaflet No. 10-57, or any leaflet mentioned in this column, send 35 cents for each leaflet (no stamps or personal cheques, please). Your order must be accompanied with a stamped, self-addressed return envelope, long one if possible. Send to: May E. Mac Lean "KNIT and CHAT" care of the Times. Please be sure to state pattern number when ordering. Allow at least three weeks for delivery.

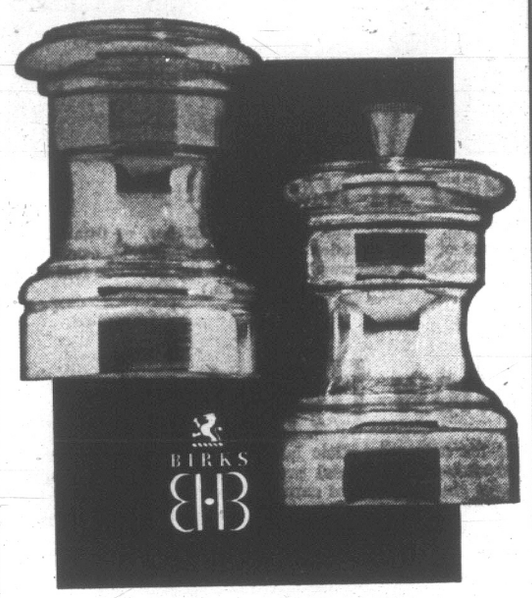

LIFTS FACES OUT OF LINES, WRINKLES, SAG

Even skin that sags and is no longer smooth, could be made firm and much younger looking. That "older look" usually appears first around the throat, but is comparatively easy to treat by very simple means that require no skill at all.

Get 2nd Debut with CEF 600 or CEF 1200 in double strength from your drug or dept. store and apply it gently to your throat and face each night before retiring. After just a few days, you will notice your skin becoming firmer again and smoother. That is because the 2nd Debut has revitalized your skin with a new supply of water from the surface clear into the inner skin.

Now They're Campaigning To Save Colquitz's Sister

By HUMPHRY DAVY

While Saanich has agreed to spend thousands of dollars to restore Colquitz Creek to its original state, a battle is being waged by conservationists to save a sister stream—the Craigflower—from pollution.

The Craigflower, sometimes called Deadman's Creek, is the watercourse for seven small lakes, including Thetis, in the Highlands. It empties into Portage Inlet.

Biologist Dr. Lorne F. Ebell, spokesmen for conservation groups, today urged the government to take prompt action to create a park-status buffer strip on both sides of the creek before large scale urbanization takes place.

"We will save thousands of dollars if we act on the creek now," he said. "If we don't, the lower areas of the creek within 10 years will decline to the present state of Colquitz."

TRAIL PROPOSED

His appeal follows a meeting last week between conservationists and directors of the Regional Parks Board to discuss a grant for the acquisition of land.

They proposed the purchase of a strip of land 100 feet wide on both sides of the creek, starting from tidal waters to Thetis Lake, a total distance of about 1.9 miles.

This would involve the purchase of 22 to 32 acres. The strip would be reforested and a trail built for walkers, riders and fishermen.

NO AUTHORITY

Planner George T. Atamanenko said the board did not have the authority to purchase land for either "conservation or for trails.

"An amendment to our letters patent would be required," he said. "And even if this was done the question of land acquisition priorities would have to be determined."

Dr. Ebell said the preservation and conservation of the creek is a government responsibility. It is partly situated in the unorganized fire district of View Royal.

The federal forestry biologist and G. R. Banning, a member of the Saanich engineer's staff, made a study of the present condition and of the recreational potential of Craigflower.

The study was made for the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association.

SIGNS OF ABUSE

The report showed that the stream's present condition is generally good, but there are signs of abuse and decline.

Ebell said two large farm areas adjacent to the creek are already staked for subdivision.

"There is an urgent need now for counter-measures to forestall rapid decline of the stream values, he said. "Given protection, certain types of stream values will be increasingly appreciated even more after urbanization."

Apart from the stream's esthetic and recreational value, Ebell said its conservation is important becuase it is used as a spawning ground for salmon.

"We cannot afford to lose one more small stream utilized by even small numbers of spawning salmon," he stated. "Underestimation of the importance of small steams to the total escapement, and attitudes that loss of one creek hardly matters, has contributed immensely to the present decline of salmon stocks."

$400 Million Playground Off Nfld.

MONTREAL (CP) — La Presse says $400,000,000 will be spent on a huge tourist development in St. Pierre-Miquelon, French islands off the south coast of Newfoundland.

The newspaper says it learned that the development will include a duty-free port, a casino, an international airport, hotels, motels, night clubs, restaurants, a new highway and a marina.

The developers, representing financial interests in Europe, North and South America and the Middle East, had won the approval of the French government and signed an agreement Monday with local authorities on St. Pierre-Miquelon.

Claude Akkaoui, a Lebanese described as one of the principal negotiators for the developers, was quoted as saying that work on the project could get under way in the next few months.

Dinner To Mark Mini Strike

A night out, courtesy of construction trade unions is the novel method chosen to mark the first anniversary of Victoria's smallest legal strike.

On Nov. 27 the strike of two employees at Hy-Fidelity Photos, 750 Discovery, will be a year old.

Pickets have patrolled the property ever since, through summer sun and winter wet.

In recognition Nov. 28 they will be guests of honor at an informal dinner party in Tally Ho Travelodge, arranged by Vancouver Island Building and Construction Trades Council.

Despite the vulnerable size of the striking unit, efforts to have the Miscellaneous Workers Local 351 of the Teamster's Union decertified have failed and the labor department has twice upheld the original certification of photo laboratory employees.

Bargaining never got off the ground and the union asked for a strike vote among the remaining three employees, who voted 2-1 in favor of a shutdown.

The strike was called and picketing began after a 72-hour statutory pause.

Rabbit Stolen

DIJON, France (Reuters)—Two thugs Tuesday night clubbed 54-year-old storeowner Raymond Lefevre as he left his store and snatched a paper bag he was carrying, thinking it contained the day's receipts. But all the bag contained was Lefevre's dinner—a rabbit.

Nurses Seated On Health Board

A representative of the Greater Victoria Registered Nurses' Association will be given a seat on the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Health Board, but she won't be permitted to vote.

The association had asked for a representative with voting privileges.

At Tuesday's board meeting North Saanich Ald. T. C. Davis said attendance by members of the medical profession was welcomed but "voting privileges is another matter."

"If enough representatives of the medical profession became board members, the taxpayers' interests might be submerged."

Oak Bay Ald. Dr. G. Scott Wallace said he welcomed this sign of closer liaison between the board and allied medical professions.

"I can see nothing but good coming of this," he said.

Victoria Ald. Mrs. Lily Wilson was the lone dissenter, arguing that "anyone carrying out policy should have nothing to do with making policy.

The meeting marked the first appearance of a representative of the Victoria Medical Society on the board. Dr. R. B. Smith was appointed the society's representative, without voting privileges.

Suez Centennial Obscured By Mid-East War

By JOSEPH E. DYNAN

CAIRO (AP)—It was one of those rare days for human endeavor, the realization of a dream thousands of years old shared by pharoahs and potentates. It was also a sublime day of achievement for a dedicated Frenchman named Ferdinand de Lesseps.

The date was Nov. 17, 1869, just a century ago. The occasion was the opening of the Suez canal, linking the Mediterranean with the Indian Ocean, a new ribbon of trade between East and West.

There is no centennial celebration. The canal has been idle more than two years and no one can say whether it ever will resume its place in commerce.

The canal now serves as a moat between two fierce antagonists, Egypt and Israel. Artillery and rocket barrages rain destruction and death among forces dug in along each bank of the canal's 103-mile length.

But that day in 1869 was a proud one for the ruler of Egypt, the Khedive Ismail, who played host to many of Europe's royalty. Ornate displays of fireworks lit the skies.

Cooks, Servants Imported

Heedless of expense, the khedive built a palace on the Nile in Cairo for his guest of honor, the Empress Eugenie of France, whose husband Napoleon III has played a crucial role in making the canal possible. The khedive imported 1,500 cooks and servants from Europe to serve his guests. Mountains of food were prepared for the series of banquets and feasts, including a grand ball for 6,000 persons.

A new opera house stood in a park in Cairo. The khedive commissioned the Italian composer Giuseppe Verdi to write an opera, Aida, on an Egyptian theme which eventually would have its world premiere in this new opera house two years later.

For de Lesseps, who had nurtured plans for such a canal for two decades, the day was one of personal triumph. He had pleaded and ranted for years, sometimes against faulty engineers or rapacious financiers but mostly against steadfast British opposition.

As a construction job the canal was relatively simple. But the political odds were staggering. Only the Frenchman's persistence and a final plea to Napoleon III had overcome London's veto, issued through England's ally, the Sultan of Turkey, the khedive's nominal overlord within the Ottoman Empire.

Shares Paid Off Debts

In 1875, when the canal was not yet paying dividends, Britain took over Ismail's shares in the settlement of the khedive's staggering debts, many of them incurred in his lavish entertainments. This gave London 176,602 shares in the operating company out of a total of 400,000.

The number of shares was later doubled to 800,000, and in 1956, when Egypt's President Nasser nationalized the canal, Britain held 532,504. The British treasury had been collecting dividends since 1894.

Egypt's republican regime had ousted the monarchy in 1952.

In 1956, after British troops left the canal zone, Nasser seized the waterway and its operating authority. Delirious mobs surged through Port Said and toppled a statue of de Lesseps.

Britain and France, together with Israel, moved to recapture the canal in November, 1956. The United Nations forced them to withdraw, but the waterway was blocked by sunken ships for several months.

Under the original de Lesseps concession, Egypt was to take over the canal in November, 1968—99 years after its opening—but this clash left a residue of bitterness.

Egypt soon proved its ability to operate the canal efficiently.

In 1966, the last full year of operation, 21,250 vessels, including 9,930 tankers, carried 274,250,000 tons of cargo through the canal. Tolls that year were about $219,000,000.

Peers, commander of the Second Canadian Escort Squadron, at celebrations held at Gisbourne, N.Z., during the recent visit of the Esquimalt-based HMCS St. Croix, HMCS Saskatchewan and HMCS Qu'Appelle. The traditional challenge, which was accepted, begins with a dart being thrown at the feet of the visitor. Currently on a 3½-month cruise, the three ships return to Esquimalt on December 17.

Amalgamation Urged

ABBOTSFORD (CP)—Conservation Minister Ken Kiernan said Tuesday the Fraser Valley communities of Abbotsford, Sumas and Matsqui should amalgamate as soon as possible. Mr. Kiernan, MLA for Chilliwack, told a service club luncheon in this community 50 miles east of Vancouver, there is no indication that the rate of growth in the area is going to diminish.

Crystal Gardens Repairs High

Victoria's shaky Crystal Gardens will cost the taxpayers another $1,700 this week.

This for a filter core replacement.

One core was replaced last year.

Recreation and community services director Jack Morgan told the city's recreation committee Monday the core had to be replaced if water standards are to be maintained and the pool kept operative.

Morgan said it is hoped the latest filter change will be the last required before the new pool in Central Park is completed.

At the same meeting the committee approved a design for a "disguised downpipe" for the grandstand at Royal Athletic Park.

The roof drainage system, comprised of decorative but ineffective chains, has been criticized since the stadium was opened.

Mayor Hugh Stephen asked Morgan if the free-hanging chains are as bad as critics said.

"They are bad," said Morgan. "When it's blowing and raining the water blows all over the place, even right into the grandstand concessions."

The new downpipes will be encased in decorative wood.

"I think they will look fine as well as do the job of camouflaging the drain pipes," said Morgan.

Boxer Fined

VANCOUVER (CP) — Professional boxer Edward Ostapovich of Vancouver was fined $25 in provincial court Monday for punching a youth in the face Sept. 30 at a city sports centre. The victim, Kevin Sean Jackson, 18, suffered a cracked cheek bone as a result of the blow.

CANADIAN HEADS MOON QUARANTINE CENTRE

Avro Arrow 'Refugee' on Top in Houston

By RAY DICK

HOUSTON (CP) — Not long ago Bryan Erb dreamed of heat shields and flaming re-entries of spacecraft and spacemen into earth's atmosphere.

Now, when he dreams, it's about bugs and rodents—thousands of them covering the range of earthly low-life—and a monster bug or super-roach from outer space that could cause havoc on earth.

The dreams started when Erb was a student in Calgary about 30 years ago. A travelling lecturer told his class that one day man would be travelling to the moon.

The tall, gaunt 38-year-old has not yet made the trip. But he has helped make it possible for others to take the 240,000-mile journey and return safely to earth.

His office is Building 37, the Lunar Receiving Laboratory, one of the main buildings in the Manned Spacecraft Centre in suburban Clear Lake City.

This month he was named acting manager of the LRL, inherited a staff of 300 and is keeper of, besides the wildlife, the returning astronauts.

PREPARE FOR RETURN

This week he is busy housecleaning for the return of the Apollo 12 crew—Charles Conrad, Richard Gordon and Alan Bean—who are expected to move into Erb's quarantine facilities with several pounds of moon rocks about Monday, Nov. 24.

The last tenants of the LRL were the Apollo 11 crew of Neil Armstrong, Edwin Aldrin and Michael Collins after their historic first trip to the moon. More than the sheets have to be changed.

Although Erb has been in the United States, mostly in Houston, since the Avro Arrow project folded in Toronto in 1959, he still is a Canadian—and an Albertan—at heart.

"I wish Canada had such a space program," he confides, and even though he knows such a project would be impossible, he gives the impression he would be the first to go back.

His wife and two children share his feelings, but Erb sees no prospects for returning. He has not yet taken out his American citizenship, "but it is only a matter of laziness," he says.

CROSSED THE BORDER

Before going to Avro in Toronto, Erb earned his bachelor and master of science degrees at the University of Alberta, a degree from the College of Aeronautics at Cranfield, England, and a master of science from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

When "the greatest airplane of its type at that time" folded in 1959, Erb followed many of the engineers and scientists south of the border.

His first years with the American space program were spent in studies of aerodynamic heating and the heating effects on the Mercury spacecraft series. The result was a heat shield that enables today's space travellers to come back to earth without burning up.

"The technology was there," he says modestly. "It just had to be developed."

Now, as manager of the LRL, his duties include quarantining the returning spacemen and containment of the lunar material they bring with them.

He conducts quarantine testing, which means exposing life forms, including plants, to the lunar material for at least 30 days to determine whether any harmful germs have been brought back.

Another duty he and his crew carry out is sample-testing of the material which later is distributed to scientists throughout the world, including Canada, for more detailed research.

STILL HAS ROCKS

He still has most of the moon rocks from Apollo 11. Only about 14 of the 46 pounds brought back have been distributed to 142 principal investigators, including nine Canadians.

Now he is ready for the second batch of rocks and astronauts, and before the process can be started all over again the $10,000,000 laboratory must be sterilized and the bugs and insects changed.

"Just because no harmful bugs or germs were found in the last samples doesn't mean there aren't any," he says. "This time the astronauts will be in a different lunar location and will be digging deeper into the moon soil."

What happens if he does find a bug this time?

"If we find it is not terrestrial, the next step will be to determine if it is harmful. If it is not harmful, that's great, because it's a new organism to study.

"If it is harmful, we will attempt to find some way to control it," he said, which may be difficult. Any bug that could survive the harsh environment of the moon might be a real problem for an aerosol can.

Castle Repair Bill Approved

The public works committee of Victoria city council Tuesday voted an additional $2,673 to be spent on repairs of Craigdarroch Castle.

This amount is additional to the original estimate of $5,000, of which the city paid $500 and the Craigdarroch Castle Society provided $4,500.

For 5 days next month you'll be glad you read this ad.

Because for 5 days next month (more perhaps) you will be faced with one of the most intimate problems a woman has to cope with. Menstruation. A fact of life. But a fact of life made easier now. Because there are Confidets. From Scott.

Confidets come in one shape. One absorbency. Only one. No slimline. Or regular. Or super.

Confidets are all three. In one napkin. You don't have to make a choice (or a mistake).

Confidets are contoured to fit your body shape. Not just tapered like other napkins. But contoured as well. Thickest through the middle. Where it matters so much. Slim at the ends so there's no show-through. Contoured two ways. That's what makes Confidets unique.

And they have the absorbency of a super pad (if you need it) without the bulkiness. The multi-layer filler holds eight times its own weight in moisture.

One more thing. Fasten a Confidet and it stays fastened. No slipping out of place.

What does all this add up to? Comfort. Real comfort. And a feeling of security that's so important.

We want you to try Confidets. Just once. We think you will stay with them.

Simply because they are a better product.

U.S., Soviet Defence Spending Said Rising

STOCKHOLM (Reuters) — Both the United States and Russia have boosted military spending 40 per cent during the last four years, a semi-official Swedish peace organization reported today.

●

The Stockholm International Peace Research Institute, financed by the Swedish government and headed by Gunnar Myrdal, world-renowned economist and sociologist, analysed international arms spending in a 440-page report published today.

The report also lists 33 major accidents known to have occurred involving nuclear weapons since 1950. The great majority involved aircraft in the United States or in U.S. Pacific tests but the list includes an unspecified accident in England and another in Morocco.

The report said a B-52 bomber with nuclear or thermonuclear weapons on board crashed 20 miles north of Toronto. The list contains no Soviet information on nuclear accidents.

The institute, set up in 1966 to commemorate 150 years of unbroken peace in Sweden, said in its report that the world as a whole now is spending about 30 per cent more of its total resources to finance military expenditure than it did in 1965.

●

Judging from the budget estimates of the U.S. and U.S.S.R., the report said the two great powers this year are spending 40 per cent more on armaments and allied material than they did in 1965.

The report said that during the four-year period surveyed, Warsaw pact nations have made substantial increases in military spending—but NATO countries, excepting the United States, showed "little upward movement."

The report—described as the first yearbook on world armaments and disarmament—also examines the technological state of the arms race, general trends in military spending and chronicles attempts at arms limitation agreements.

●

The editors of the report noted that the section devoted to strategic arms competition leaned heavily on information from American sources because there was hardly any authoritative publication of Soviet material.

PRECEDENT SHATTERED BY JOINT RECEPTION

HELSINKI (AP) — The U.S. and the Soviet ambassadors are giving a precedent-shattering joint party in the Finnish capital today during the one-day recess in the strategic arms limitation talks.

The reception being given by Ambassadors Val Peterson and A. E. Kovalev is the first in Helsinki—and diplomats believe the first anywhere—to be given jointly by Soviet and American ambassadors.

★ ★ ★

The idea—understood to have been proposed by Peterson and willingly seconded by his Soviet counterpart—was to stage a get-acquainted social for the disarmament delegations, their staffs and leaders of the Finnish government, host to the conference.

About 200 guests were invited to the reception.

The joint reception underscored the air of cordiality which has surrounded the negotiators since they first met Monday.

Conference sources said there have been no procedural disputes so far.

Canada Seeks Chemical Ban At Geneva

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Canada, in an evident attempt to get crucial chemical and bacteriological warfare talks away from East-West polemics, gave notice Tuesday it wants point-by-point discussion of the matter before the Geneva disarmament talks next year.

George Ignatieff, Canada's disarmament negotiator, said in a speech in the General Assembly's political committee that it is doubtful that substantive decisions can be settled at this session of the assembly.

But it is evident that Canada and some other countries want to prevent British proposals calling for a ban on the production and stockpiling of bacteriological weapons from being ignored.

The Soviet bloc already has submitted a draft proposal covering both bacteriological and chemical warfare that Western countries consider mostly a propaganda exercise.

Ignatieff said that Canada will propose that the whole question be sent back to Geneva where the British first submitted their draft.

Ignatieff said Canada feels the heart of any attempt to ban chemical and bacteriological weapons is the "prohibition of research, development, production and stockpiling of both kinds of weapons."

Alberta Promotion

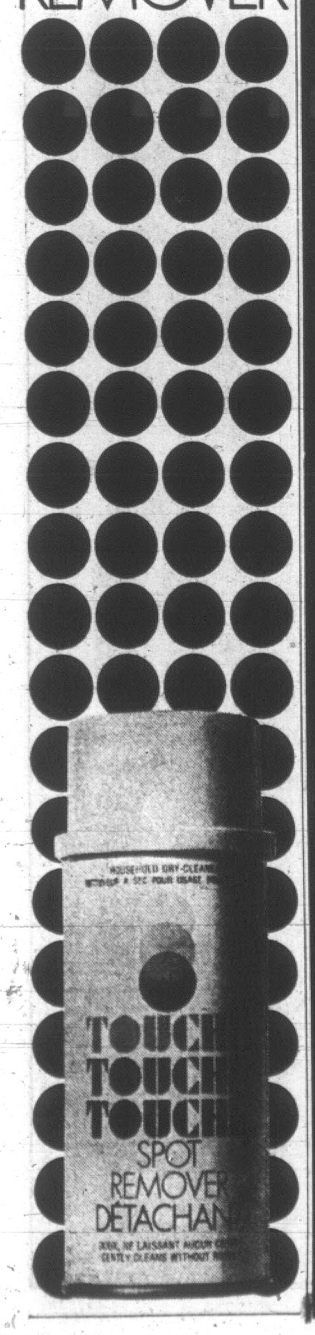

EDMONTON (CP) — Premier Harry Strom will visit Europe early next month to promote the sale of Alberta products and encourage investment in the province, his office announced Tuesday.

City Vocational School Prepared for Use

By BOB MITCHELL

Early January will see teachers, students and equipment begin the gradual move into the completed $2,285,000 workshop complex of the Greater Victoria Vocational School.

Principal John Drysdale says the school, located on Wilkinson Road north of the provincial jail and east of Interurban Road will ultimately be comparable in size to the Burnaby Vocational School, the largest vocational training centre in British Columbia.

With the first phase of the school nearly ready for occupancy, phase two—more classrooms and an administration wing—is on public works department drawing boards.

SEVEN AREAS

The $4.5 million school will ultimately have 130,000 square feet of teaching area, including 10 shops and 15 classrooms.

The Victoria Vocational School, now located in four temporary quarters in the city, now offers training in seven areas:

Basic training for skill development, four commercial courses, two drafting courses, one course in electronics, practical nursing, office machine mechanics and parks gardening.

Since the early 1960s there was public pressure on the government, especially from school trustees, to build a vocational school here. The government promised a school in 1963, and construction of the first phase began just over a year ago.

Education Minister Donald Brothers has since said the Greater Victoria vocational school will double training facilities on southern Vancouver Island.

FIRST FOR B.C.

New apprenticeship courses to be introduced include welding and steel fabrication, automotive repairs, auto body repairs, industrial electricity, and electronics, marine and stationary diesel engineering, small engine repair and maintenance, carpentry and building construction, plumbing and steamfitting.

Victoria will also be the first vocational school in the province to offer a course for hospital orderlies, along with courses for cooks, stewards, waiters and waitresses.

School principal Drysdale and vice-principal Reg Mylrea have their offices at 1250 Quadra, getting ready for the move into the new building and administering courses taken by some 250 day and evening students.

Drysdale is the former principal of the Dawson Creek vocational school, and was appointed to Victoria in July. Mylrea is former co-ordinator of adult education for the Greater Victoria school board.

BASIC COURSE

Main requirements for admission to courses offered in any vocational school are that the students be 16 or over and have completed Grade 10. Grade 12 is required for some courses.

Students without the necessary academic qualifications can enter a five-month program entitled "basic training for skill development," which includes training to the Grade 10 or 12 level in math, science and English.

Fees for all pre-employment or soft-core courses are $15 a month. Students in the various trades who are selected under the apprenticeship plan can have their tuition paid by the provincial department of labor.

Drysdale saw the vocational school as ultimately playing a vital role in local education and employment.

He said the school is "practically a Manpower centre," with local employers constantly in touch to recruit new trainees, especially in the commercial area.

"Once a girl has taken the secretarial course here, all she is going to have to learn is the routine peculiar to the office she works in."

He dismissed the possibility of local employers in industry hiring on-the-job trainees in preference to vocational school trainees:

SHOP AROUND

"Most employers are pretty hard-nosed. If they think they can train better than we can, it's probably because they don't know what we're doing."

Students who enter the school with no clear idea of what trade or work they would like to go into will be encouraged to "shop around the shops."

To keep pace with local employment needs, the school has a Manpower liaison officer on staff, and theoretically new programs can be created to train personnel to fill new positions. An example is a new custodial course to start in February.

MOVING GRANT

Local hospitals have begun hiring more and more practical nurses, and Drysdale noted the school is "stacked up to May" with applications for the practical nurse's course.

There are 21 teachers at the school at present, and 11 more will be hired in January.

Under a mobility program sponsored by the Department of Manpower a person trained in B.C. vocational school can receive a grant to cover the cost of moving elsewhere in Canada for a job.

A proposed "equivalency" program will make it possible for vocational school trainees to enter a regional college, just as college students can transfer to a university.

Study Follows Atlantic Salmon

NEWCASTLE, N.B. (CP) — The first study of its kind in Canada—electronically tracking Atlantic salmon—is being conducted in the Miramichi River by the federal fisheries department.

The experiment was designed to obtain information on how pollution affects the movement of salmon. Dr. Paul Elson of the fisheries biological station at St. Andrews, N.B., said the researchers expect to learn more about natural and man-made water conditions.

"The Miramichi area has the greatest salmon-producing streams in the world, and certainly there is an increased burden of pollution of various kinds."

Dr. Elson said the scientists are trying to ascertain the reasons for a reported decrease in salmon entering the Miramichi estuary in recent years.

Up to 48 salmon are being equipped with exterior tags and internal sonar capsules. The latter, inserted into the stomach, are about two inches long and a half-inch in diameter. Each contains an electronic package activated by four mercury batteries. They have a life span of about 30 days and can be tracked or monitored as far as 1½ miles away.

TRACKING SALMON, federal fishing department officials fit fish with an exterior tag as part of an experiment designed to obtain information on how pollution affects the movement of salmon. The study, first of its kind in Canada, is being done in the Miramichi River in New Brunswick. (CP Photo.)

CELEBRATES WITH A DANCE

Sea Otter Deserts U.S. Waters

Nitka, the sea otter, has deserted her clan in the United States and moved into Canadian territorial waters.

She is one of 60 airlifted in August from Amchitka Island, Alaska, to Hoquiam on Washington State's Coast, in an experiment to re-establish the mammal in Pacific Northwest waters.

Nitka and 29 others of her kind were released at the Washington site and 30 others let go at Bunsby Islands, 220 miles northwest of Victoria on the Island's west coast.

But she didn't like her new American home. Fifteen of her mates died within two months.

TOO LITTLE FOOD

Too many people, too little shell food, the experts think

Nitko surprised lighthouse keeper Trevor Anderson at Race Rocks Monday as she sat under his shed grooming her whiskers.

Nitka accepted a fish from him and then to his amazement dove into the water and staged a water dance. She rolled, surfed, barrelled and did all those things expert swimmers do.

It was a happy event. Anderson is the first man to see a sea otter in south Vancouver Island waters since Boston traders nearly butchered the animal into extinction more than 70 years ago.

The last herd in Alaska was protected just in time.

B.C. Fish and Wildlife director James Hatter said the B.C. site off Bunsby Island was a more suitable habitant for sea otters than the Washington coast.

"There is more surf and rocky shelves on the Island site," he said. "This is a type of coast they like."

He said no one yet had sighted a member of the island herd, but he felt certain that on the whole they are doing well.

Italy Hit Hard By General Strike

ROME (AP) — An estimated 12,000,000 to 15,000,000 workers stayed away from their jobs across Italy today in a 24-hour general strike for more low-cost housing.

Italy's third general strike in less than 10 months brought buses, streetcars, commerce and industry to a virtual standstill.

It was estimated the strike would cost employees $80,000,000 in lost wages and the country twice that in lost production.

The big three labor unions called for mass demonstrations to drive home their demand for a new government housing policy. Political extremists of both the left and right threatened to turn the demonstrations into battles.

On the day of the Apollo 12 moon landing, there were no newspapers.

The unions claim that during the 24 years of post-war rule by the Christian Democratic party, the housing situation has degenerated into a hopeless mess.

In Rome, 60,000 live in shanty towns while 30,000 apartments remain empty because of high rents. A worker spends up to 45 per cent of his monthly wage to rent a decent apartment.

Montreal's Bomb Disposal Unit More Effective Than Pretty

MONTREAL (CP) — Angel isn't much to look at, but then not many bomb-disposal units are.

Angel now is part of the equipment of the Montreal bomb squad and replaces a hostily-constructed "bomb truck" built six years ago following the first outbreak of mailbox bombings.

Original plans for Angel came from the Los Angeles police department, but were subsequently changed after study by police across Canada and in the United States, the army and provincial medical-legal experts.

The new unit is far more sophisticated than its well-used pioneering forerunner.

In one compartment is an 84-pound bomb suit, a fire extinguisher, cables and various instruments, including a stethoscope.

A four-foot-high steel shield guards the front and the sides are poles with mechanical "hands."

The main piece of equipment is a canister of three-quarter-inch steel, weighing about a ton.

Should the bomb explode while being driven through the city streets, the canister would act like a huge cannon and send shrapnel up out of harms way.

A canvas support holds the bomb during transport to a detonation area.

Det. Sgt. Robert Cote, in charge of the bomb squad, said the old unit deserves a first-rate burial.

"For six years it carried some 100 bombs in very dramatic situations."

Built in one night, the unit was set up on a boat trailer and was nothing more than a box of one-inch plywood with two compartments.

One was an oil-filled drum. The other was stuffed with sawdust and cotton waste to cushion the shock should a bomb go off while it was being moved.

Sharp Impressed Cairo Observers

SHARP
. . . well-received

Canadian Minister Sees Both Sides of Mid-East Conflict

By CY FOX

CAIRO (CP)—External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp came to the Middle East a self-described learner but may have left a few local heads somewhat wiser as a result of the week-long visit he ended on Monday.

Any outsider taking the plunge into the swirl of conflict between Israel and the Arabs is bound to find himself confronted with issues—such as Israeli insistence on recognition of its statehood and Arab complaints about the plight of Palestine refugees.

A highlight of Sharp's Cairo stay was the patience and cordiality reported to have been features of his reception by President Nasser and other Egyptian officials.

This was the case despite the fact that some of the remarks ascribed to the visitor normally might have been found discomforting by his hosts.

Iranian Observations Heard

At the start of his Middle East tour, Sharp heard Iranian observations on the conflict which were sufficiently grim to dispel easy optimism about a quick settlement.

Later, Israeli authorities made sure the minister was given on-the-spot grounding in how it feels to farm border-area land under constant harassment from Arab forces.

In Egypt, Sharp saw for himself how Cairo has been prepared for possible war.

Sharp has proved the type of visitor likely to remind Egyptians of certain realities and get away with it.

Reports are that Sharp, fresh from seeing life on a beleaguered Israeli collective farm, received a respectful Egyptian hearing for his reiteration of praise for the farmers' determined spirit.

The nearest thing to a counterblast in this instance was said to be an Egyptian assertion that Israeli emphasis on domestic development shows a disregard for neighbors' rights similar to that shown the Jews by anti-Semite forces in past years.

The Canadian minister publicly expressed delight at the length of his interview with President Nasser, whom he saw for 90 minutes.

Nasser Stresses Peace

Nasser is termed by some quarters a believer in the inevitability of Arab-Israeli war.

But to his visitor from Ottawa, he chose to stress a desire for peaceful settlement of the chronic conflict.

One line of argument adopted by the president is the link between how well he fares in the struggle against Israel and his position as top man in the Arab world.

Sharp had come out of Iran in a non-optimistic mood, which seemed strengthened by what he saw and heard in Israel.

Reporters seeking to determine whether such a mood pointed to a changed Canadian policy on third-party peace settlements were told to wait until Sharp consulted with his colleagues in Ottawa.

To all appearances, he considers direct negotiations between Nasser and Golda Meir, Israel's prime minister, a far-off prospect.

But Sharp's spirit on leaving Egypt struck observers as slightly more buoyant than after the Israeli tour.

And the caution with which he made his public statements here impressed rather than annoyed some journalists in Cairo.

Soviet Moon Rocket Blows Up at Launch

By STUART AUERBACH

WASHINGTON (WP) —The giant rocket designed to lift Russian cosmonauts to the moon blew up on its Central Asian launch pad last summer, crippling Soviet effort to land men on the moon.

The rocket, with its 10 million pound thrust, is more powerful than the Saturn V which is carrying America's second lunar landing team to the moon. The Russian rocket exploded during its first test launch, American space experts here revealed this week.

Although the Russians have never acknowledged the existence of the giant rocket, American space officials have told Congress about it.

Since 1964, American experts have believed that Russia planned to fly men to the moon with that rocket.

As recently as last June, before America's first moon landing, Russia talked about a lunar landing sometime this year. The absence of a Russian moon landing indicates that something went wrong, one American space expert said.

The explosion was reported this week by the magazine Aviation Week and Space Technology and by Peter Fairley, science editor of Independent Television News in Britain.

Fairley said "extensive damage" from the explosion was photographed by an American spy satellite.

For years, the Russians had been rolling the giant rocket on and off the launch pad at the Tyuratam Cosmodrome in the Central Asian steppes of Kazahkistan.

American space experts, presumably studying spy satellite pictures, couldn't understand why Russia put so much power into the launching stage of the rocket without any apparent upper stage power.

That is the thrust that is needed to push the rocket out of earth orbit into the long trip to the moon.

Space experts here emphasized that the explosion of the big Russian rocket was not connected with the launching last month of three Soyuz spaceships and their welding experiments, which may have been designed to pave the way for the future construction of a space station.

Mstislav V. Keldysh, president of the Soviet Academy of Sciences, hinted in Moscow this month that Russian plans to land on the moon had been shelved.

He said that there are no immediate Soviet plans to land on the moon, although Russian scientists expect to "systematically study" the moon and other planets with unmanned spaceships.

"Will we fly to the moon and other planets in the future? We shall. Because interplanetary journeys are one of the final goals in the mastery of cosmic space," Keldysh said.

Pope Issues Ultimatum

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul defended controversial new rites for the Roman Catholic mass today and said all Catholics "must promptly adhere" to them.

His words, at his regular general audience, met recent criticism by Antonio Cardinal Bacci and Alfredo Cardinal Oattaviani, two semi-retired conservative members of the Roman Curia, who had suggested the new mass was almost "heritical."

Recalling that the second Vatican ecumenical council had asked for the changes in the mass, Pope Paul said that using the new rites was "an act of obedience, a fact of coherence with the church itself, a step forward in its authentic tradition, a demonstration of fidelity and vitality to which all must promptly adhere."

PINPOINT MOON LANDING; FOUR-HOUR FIRST LOOK

Pair Geared for Longest Stroll

'Wowee, Fantastic' Shout Pair as Moon Dust Flies

HOUSTON (AP) — Two lively American astronauts made a bull's-eye landing on the moon today, raised their flag and wise-cracked through a four-hour exploration of the black, powdery surface.

Before returning to their lunar ferry Intrepid, they set up five scientific instruments powered by the first nuclear generator on the moon.

In landing on the Ocean of Storms, Charles (Pete) Conrad and Alan L. Bean carried man's quest for the unknown to that alien soil a second time. They opened a new age of discovery, the first detailed exploration of the moon.

Their moonwalk was spoiled for earthlings when a camera transmitting the first color television pictures for the moon failed after 45 minutes. Experts at the Manned Spacecraft Centre believed the camera was accidentally pointed at the sun, burning the sensitive image tube. There was little hope it could be repaired.

The moment they landed on the moon, Conrad shouted: "Outstanding!" And Bean exclaimed: "I can't wait to get outside!" (See page 3.)

They were two jubilant men, chattering like a couple of chipmunks as they went about the important business of exploring the strange world where the gravity force is only one-sixth that on earth.

There was excitement in Conrad's voice when he spotted an unmanned Surveyor spacecraft resting only 600 feet away in the crater that had been their target for the pinpoint landing.

BOTH WERE HAPPY

Both men were exuberant as they gathered rocks and spotted strange mounds of rubble that they described as "fantastic." Conrad's cackling laugh became a familiar sound.

"Wowee" was a favorite expression as Conrad and Bean prowled the surface, ranging more than 1,000 feet to set up the experiments and to inspect the mounds and what appeared to them to be fresh crater.

The astronauts were amazed at the thick, black dust that darkened their space suits as they moved like ghostly figures in a weird surrounding.

"We're really filthy," Conrad reported.

The third member of the expedition, Richard F. Gordon Jr., became almost a forgotten man as he orbited some 65 miles overhead in the Yankee Clipper command ship, waiting for Conrad and Bean to complete their 31½-hour exploration trip.

But Gordon helped pinpoint the landing site by spotting both Intrepid and the Surveyor from his high-flying outpost.

Conrad and Bean steered Intrepid to its perfect landing on the eastern edge of the Ocean of Storms at 1:54:29 a.m. EST and became the third and fourth humans to leave their imprint in the lunar dust.

TWO STARTED WALKS

The first of two planned moonwalks started at 3:44 a.m. when Conrad backed down a nine-rung ladder and stepped ashore in the new world. Bean followed 31 minutes later.

Conrad spent a total of three hours 44 minutes outside and Bean an even three hours in temperatures above 150 degrees.

After stowing their gear and eating, they planned eight hours sleep, resting for the second excursion set to start at 9:32 p.m. today.

"We won't have any trouble sleeping tonight," Conrad reported after the exhausting walk.

Blastoff from the moon is slated for 6:23 a.m. Thursday and a linkup with the Yankee Clipper at 11:02 a.m. After an extra day in lunar orbit to photograph future landing sites, the three head for home and a splashdown in the Pacific.

The astronauts reported the soil was thicker and blacker than that in the Sea of Tranquility where Apollo 11 pilots Neil A. Armstrong and Edwin E. Aldrin made man's first lunar landing in July.

"Your boots dig into the soil quite a bit," Bean said. "If you don't pick up your feet you really kick a load of dirt in front of you."

A-Power Up There

Powered by an atomic thermoelectric generator, foreground in drawing at left, the complex experimental setup looks like this as astronauts Charles Conrad and Alan Bean spend more than 31 hours on the moon. The astronauts, shown at right in their moon outfits, are making the first detailed exploration of the surface in the Ocean of Storms. The scientific package will be left on the moon and is expected to beam data back to earth for a year or perhaps two. (AP Wirephotos.)

5% LIMIT URGED ON PAY BOOSTS

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Trudeau said in the Commons Tuesday he supports a suggestion that wage increases be limited to 5 per cent and price increases to 2½ per cent for a certain period.

He was replying to Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, who attributed the suggestion to John H. Young, chiarman of the prices and incomes commission, in a Tuesday speech at Regina.

'Don't Intimidate' TV News: Committee

WASHINGTON (WP) — Several Congressmen who oversee the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) delivered a friendly, but blunt warning Tuesday to the agency's new Republican chairman—don't "intimidate" the news operations of network television.

Dean Burch, the newly-appointed chairman, responded with a firm denial that he had any intention of intimidation when he personally called the three networks and asked for transcripts of their commentaries on President Nixon's Nov. 3 speech on Vietnam.

One congressman said that "there's no question the lack of live coverage of the November mobilization was affected by the administration's action."

Freeze Cuts School Plans

By BOB MITCHELL

Spokesmen for two Capital Region school boards said today the tight money situation in provincial school construction financing could slow education department approval of projects already approved by ratepayers in referendums.

The government announced Tuesday lack of capital funds for school construction has forced a ban on all construction referendums and bylaws in Dec. 6 civic elections.

Resources Minister Ray Williston made the announcement for Education Minister Donald Brothers who is in Paris this week.

Williston said classroom needs for 1970 will be approved on an individual and emergency basis, and, in an interview today indicated the restriction will also apply to projects from past referendums that are currently awaiting education department approval.

The government move affects a total of 34 referendums in B.C., including the following Island districts: Cowichan, Qualicum, Alberni, Courtenay, Campbell River and Gulf Islands.

VIC WEST HIT?

Trustee Peter Bunn, chairman of Greater Victoria school board buildings and grounds committee, said today a number of projects already under way from previous referendums could be delayed by the tight money situation.

An addition to Victoria West elementary has been at the education department since July awaiting approval to call tenders, Bunn said.

"The most reprehensible thing is that the minister—little Brothers—should stand up at the trustees convention in October and say we should aim at building 1,000 classrooms a year.

"Then the moment he's out of the country, big Ray (Williston) comes in and announces this, and that's when you find out who's really in command.

"The whole philosophy of education building in B.C. is 'We build today for yesterday,' when we should be building today for tomorrow."

Brothers announced a record

Full Planning Study For Gulf Area Urged

The Capital Regional Board will be asked next week to approve an immediate start to a full planning study in the Gulf Islands.

The request will be made by the Capital Region Planning Board, which at its meeting Tuesday received a feasibility study on the islands which will be forwarded to the regional board.

The study, prepared over the last few months by planning board officials, details the "unregulated and extensive development" in the Gulf Islands.

Figures and maps showed a rapid increase in subdivision over the last few years, with subdivisions scattering in different places.

'WITHOUT GOALS'

The feasibility study said development is occuring without prior goals for the islands and objectives to achieve these goals.

Small lot subdivision (roughly two acres and less) had produced 3,144 lots between 1959 and 1968, "a very high figure comparable to a metropolitan suburb," said planning board staff member John Northey.

Large-parcel vacant land sales between 1960 and 1968 showed 8,100 acres involved — almost twice the land area of the city of Victoria. Northey called this "large, even in metropolitan centres."

Total sales, vacant and improved land, in the same period showed the dollar value more than tripling — from $2.1 million in 1960 to $7.7 million in 1968.

700% INCREASE

Vacant land value trends saw some property increasing by as much as 700 per cent in the same period.

Trends indicated a higher percentage of permanent homes in new subdivisions — 55 per cent of dwellings being erected on Salt Spring Island were permanent, although in the outer islands 72 per cent were summer or temporary.

Population, however, remained steady — it was 3,018 in 1961 and 3,151 in 1966, an increase of 133. But this is explained by the fact census

LITTLE HOPE HELD CAMERA WILL OPERATE

The second moon walk of astronauts Charles Conrad and Alan Bean is scheduled to begin at 9:40 p.m. today when Conrad steps to the lunar surface, followed seven minutes later by Bean.

The walk is scheduled to be covered for earthbound viewers beginning at 9 p.m. on Channel 8 and at 9:30 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

However, Apollo officials hold scant hope that the color camera taken to the moon will function. It failed early today but the astronauts will attempt to activate it at 9:32 p.m. before they step to the moon's surface.

Poverty Prober Warns of Riots

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada will be rocked with riots within five years unless poverty-ridden people achieve a decisive victory, Frederick Joyce, director of the Senate committee on poverty, said Tuesday night.

He told a news conference he feels Vancouver would be likely place for riots to begin.

"You have a really big welfare-poverty problem here," said Joyce, noting that Vancouver's mild climate drew down-and-outers from many parts of the country.

The committee, headed by Senator David Croll, is holding poverty hearings here today and Thursday.

The committee began its hearings in Ottawa last April and since then has held hearings in Halifax, Charlottetown and Winnipeg.

Mr. Joyce directs a staff of eight researchers and two secretaries who back up the committee. He said his people are still looking "for an authoritative statement on what causes poverty."

ARCTIC MELTING GREAT FOR RUSSIANS BUT . . .

Scientist Fears Ice Age

By JOHN MIKA

Every motorist stepping on the gas is speeding the world straight into another ice age.

The cold collision could come within 1,000 years —many of our lifetimes away but only an instant in geological time.

That's what the dean of Canada's oceanographer's worries about in his retirement.

He's Dr. J. P. Tully, who turns 63 later this month after a distinguished career as head of the Pacific fisheries research group from 1945 to 1966 and secretary of the Canadian Committee on Oceanography until a few months ago.

During that time he became internationally recognized as an expert in such areas as prediction of pollution in oceans, hydraulics of seaways, airborne radiation and the mechanics of heating and cooling in the sea.

He's here keeping in touch at the CCQ's annual meeting in the Empress Hotel.

●

Tall, muscular and vigorous despite his white hair, he exudes humor and warmth as he listens to the dreams of the "youngsters" at the conference, but his own tale warns of a nightmare coming if man continues thoughtlessly defiling his environment.

Because of his speciailties, reporters asked him for comment on Russian suggestions for warming up the Arctic Ocean to provide better transportation possibilities.

Smiling on the Inside

Spine-tingling experience for 10-year-old Richard LeNoury and the old grey whale (who ain't what she used to be). Richard slipped away from a Frank Hobbs School tour of the Provincial Museum to bone up on whale anatomy at close range. Judging by the toothless grin, the whale, who spent 10 years in a box in pieces, is enjoying his popularity.

Crisis Over Beds Prompts Plea For Welfare Aid

The province will be asked by the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health to increase welfare payments to private hospitals to prevent a desperate bed shortage in the Victoria area from worsening.

The board Tuesday decided to ask for "urgent consideration" of the increase, after reading a report on the sub-standard condition of several smaller private hospitals in the area.

The report was prepared by senior medical health officer, Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread.

After inspecting nine private hospitals in converted buildings, Whitbread said two of them should have been closed 16 months ago and the others phased out by 1971.

MAINLY WELFARE

"Closure of any of these hospitals would result in a catastrophe to the area as there is at present a long waiting list of patients requiring accommodation," he said.

The nine hospitals range in bed capacity from 12 to 45 with a total of 285 beds.

Welfare patients take up 203 of these beds, and hospital officials contend the provincial grants do not cover the cost of caring for these patients.

Whitbread said orders should be given to bring these hospitals up to provincial and municipal standards.

If improvements were ordered, however, some of the hospitals would likely close down, he said.

"In many cases the unwillingness on the part of management to maintain the buildings is due to a lack of income."

He said staffs are performing adequately in most of these hospitals despite salaries much lower than in the larger hospitals.

He said the increased welfare payments would mean that smaller hospitals could afford to meet the standards.

The board will also request the province to grant extension of the interim permits for the operation of the private hospitals in old buildings.

Whitbread said many owners are not maintaining the physical standards of the hospitals due to the short-term life expectancy of the hospitals.

"These hospital beds will be replaced when the 650 extended care beds have been constructed by the Regional Hospital Board," said Whitbread.

"We cannot expect construction of the extended care beds to be completed before 1971."

Board member and MLA-elect Dr. G. Scott Wallace said it is unlikely any of the 650 extended care beds approved for this area will be built before 1971.

"It's very nice to build new beds and tear down old ones," he said.

UNWISE MOVE

"What we really need are totally new beds."

Wallace said it would be unwise it exert pressure on small private hospitals to improve their facilities since they were trying to operate on less-than-adequate welfare rates.

"Financial support should be increased," he said. "If we lose any of these hospitals now the situation only gets worse."

Whitbread at the Oct. 15 health board meeting promised to name the older private hospitals that should be closed.

He did so for board members but did not make the names available to the press.

Private Hospitals Badly Off

Ogden Point Work Three Days Behind

Pressure of work backed up during the six-week B.C. longshoremen strike has put Ogden Point shipping as much as three days behind schedule.

Port agent F. J. Ritchie said the problem is being felt at other Island ports and on the lower mainland as ships that lined up awaiting the end of the strike last week occupy all available berths.

The result is that longshore gangs are working to capacity and because of the great volume of cargo to be handled, there now are insufficient gangs to clear the docks.

★ ★ ★

Once the work load peak has been reached, possibly within a week or two, shipping should again approach a normal level.

As an example of the delay facing ships discharging general cargo to take on lumber, plywood, pulp, paper or grain at Ogden Point, the new CPR lumber carrier J. V. Clyne left Tuesday night instead of Saturday.

★ ★ ★

Only two gangs were available for work on the ship Tuesday, and only one assigned to the Kostis Prios, also loading lumber. The latter ship stood idle for a day until a longshore gang was available.

The 13 gangs based in Victoria are also dispatched to Chemainus, Cowichan Bay and Crofton when required.

One Victoria gang, sent to Cowichan Bay, worked overtime to clear the Bodenstein from port Tuesday.

The Japanese freighter Kozan Maru, waited at Ogden Point an extra day, until longshoremen were unable to unload her cargo of steel. She left port Tuesday.

★ ★ ★

A freighter with Japanese oranges is expected to dock at Ogden Point Monday, a longshoreman official said.

He said she would call here first rather than head for Vancouver directly "because the warehouses over there are plugged and can't handle the traffic."

He added that as many oranges as possible would be unloaded at Victoria during one day's work. These would be slated for sale on Vancouver Island.

Apathy: It Can Strike Anyone

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Political apathy replaced public apathy at a meeting of the Capital Region Planning Board Tuesday.

The board had arranged a regional study session — one of a series — on a look at downtown Victoria.

But when the scheduled time arrived, only three politicians were present — Victoria Ald. Ian Stewart, regional planning board chairman; Saanich Ald. Edith Gunning, and Oak Bay Ald. Frances Elford.

Also present were planning board director Tony Roberts, staff planner John Northey; city planner Geoff Greenhalgh; city manager Dennis Young; and a reporter from the Victoria Daily Times.

● ● ●

Notification had been extended to all members of the Capital Regional Board and every elected municipal official in the area, said Ald. Stewart.

And that is approximately 50 politicians, although a number of them are unable to attend day-time meetings because of their work. (Three persons — Central Saanich Mayor Archibald Galbraith, North Saanich Ald. Trevor Davis and Sidney Ald. S. G. Gardner had attended the earlier business meeting).

"Because of the poor attendance, I will have to call the meeting off," said Ald. Stewart.

Only three days ago, at a Parksville seminar of the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities, 65 delegates from cities, towns, districts and villages up and down the island had discussed public apathy and made a number of suggestions to overcome this.

● ● ●

The apathy spread to Saanich public works committee Tuesday night, which was unable to pass motions because it lacked a quorum.

Earlier, council extended the membership of group B committees — which includes public works — to full council, or nine persons.

But only four showed up — chairman Ald. William Campbell and Aldermen Frank Waring, William Noel and Leslie Passmore. Also attending were seven mumicipal officials, two members of the public and two newspaper reporters.

At one point, where business was being held up pending the hopeful arrival of a fifth council member to make a quorum, Ald. Campbell said "it's very embarrassing."

And at another point, Ald. Noel deadpanned — "while we are talking about garbage and waiting for a quorum . . ."

● ● ●

The committee was informed that the new municipal garbage trucks have arrived and the service will start Jan. 17.

The municipality will advertise for staff and applications will be accepted from the staff of the present private contractor and municipal people "and we'll pick the best from both," said engineer Neville Life.

The two residents who waited unsuccessfully for the quorum, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Cox, asked that their property at 2680 Macdonald Drive be excluded from the sewerage enterprise area. The consensus was to turn down the request.

Finally, just over two hours after the public works committee meeting started, Ald. Alan Newberry arrived and a quorum was formed so decisions could be made.

Man Sentenced to 5 Years On Marijuana Trafficking

A 22-year-old Victoria man was sentenced in county court today to five years in the penitentiary for possession of marijuana for trafficking.

"It is clear you were cynically engaged in living off the weaknesses of others," Judge Montague Drake told Brock Douglas Flett of 428 Superior Street.

"The law takes a very serious view of this."

Crown counsel Edward St. J. Pollard said four packages containing 8.8 pounds of marijuana were found in a car driven by Flett on May 4.

NOT FIRST TIME

The car was stopped by Saanich police outside a house on Glanford Avenue. Four packages found in the back of the car were analysed as marijuana at the crime detection laboratory in Vancouver, and Flett's fingerprints were found on them.

Counsel said the car had a 1969 licence plate on the front and a 1968 plate on the back. Flett told police the owner of the car was in Wilkinson Road jail and the car had been loaned to him.

"The law has the responsibility of trying to stamp out trafficking in drugs," Pollard said, "and this is not the first time Flett has been before the courts.

"This is not a case for leniency but for deterring others from this practice."

Defence counsel C. A. Becker said a probation officer's report on Flett suggested a "minimum sentence," but Judge Drake noted that he had "a very poor record."

OWNER OF GOLD COINS FAILS TO SHOW AT CLINK

Rare gold coins held by Saanich police are attracting collectors — but so far the owner has failed to appear.

The coin collection was found by two brothers on a hike recently and turned over to police. It has been valued by experts at $5,000.

It seems quite a few people have lost gold coins.

Police Inspector John Post said today half a dozen collectors have been in touch to see if any of their lost coins have turned up in the find.

But so far nobody's description has been close to what police are holding — and not describing.

Post said coin collections are a favorite target for burglars and perhaps half a dozen are stolen annually in Saanich alone.

Arthur Mayse . . .

AT LEAST ONCE EACH year, my dear one and I take a long, hard look at our surroundings, and decide it's high time we hunted another place. This seizure may occur in soggy, miserable little February, or perhaps in June when the lawn grass grows fast, and the weeds even faster.

In any case, the pattern follows more or less these lines.

We have been moiling and toiling for several hours when one of us straightens a weary back. The other yanks a handful of chickweed or picks up one more blowdown branch, then follows suit.

Win says, "I've been thinking."

"Yeah. Me too."

★

Then whichever of us gets to it first airs the dark, rebellious thought.

"We don't have to do this, you know. We could find ourselves a place that didn't have a garden. Just a little patch of grass and maybe a couple of window boxes."

"Or it could be on a rock outcrop," the other chips in.

We keep talking it up, and pretty soon we have evolved a mental picture of this dream-home.

★

It will be neither too large nor too small. It will have trees, but not so many that leaf-raking will become a burden. Naturally, the basement will be dry, and the taxes low-low.

Our next step in the progression is to run through the Houses for Sale ads, which offer the most inspired writing you'll find in print.

To show you what I mean, here are a few choice snatches from a specimen blurb:

"Here is a distinguished six-room home in an exclusive residential district."

(Depends on how you interpret "distinguished." I thought it looked kind of funny, with its breakneck roof-slope that swooped to a gimicky little peak above the front door. But the district was exclusive, all right, and especially in icy winter weather. Its slick hills excluded traffic so effectively that only those who had no recourse would attempt them.)

I could go on about the "fine rockery" which consisted of a few shale slabs stuck on end like so many gravestones, and the arbitrary slopes of thinly-grassed fill that became "three rolling terraces."

★

But it's enough to state that we once owned the Toronto house in question, and were so impressed by the description that we came within an ace of whipping it off the market before someone else grabbed it.

Anyway, the upshot of this occasional discontent is that we hop in the car and go searching for a house closer to our hearts' desire.

This pursuit began when we were still battling Ontario moles — be glad we don't have 'em here! — for possession of those rolling terrances.

Since then, it has led us into and out of many on Open House, and landed us in various predicaments.

★

There was the place accessible only by a string of planks across mud. I teetered off the second board, plunged ankle-deep, and pulled one foot out of its shoe. Then I tried to free the other foot, and lost that shoe. Finally, groping for both shoes, I fell into the wallow, and escaped only after some stern hauling by my wife and the builder's agent.

It was a nice place, but we decided as I recovered my shoes with the help of a handy two-by-four that it was not for us.

Neither was the stately old white elephant that boasted a completely sinister black marble bath — or the ranch-type with the warped cupboard doors that only a crowbar could open — or its neighbor with the patch of poison oak out back that I mistook for strayed Virginia creeper.

Once, though, we really began to think we had it made.

But before we could get excited about our find, the man dusting his rose bushes next door sidled over the property line.

"Do you know where the storm water off the back slope goes?" he asked.

We didn't, and it was a point worth considering.

★

He pointed his dust gun and said, "Into that basement."

Eventually, a time comes in such questions when we realize that there are good houses, bad houses and so-so houses. But no dream-houses.

With that fact re-discovered, we are ready to go home to a haven that may be less than perfect, but has improved remarkably during our absence.

UNDER ANTI-RIOT ACT

March Chiefs Probed

By PAUL W. VALENTINE

WASHINGTON (WP) — The justice department has launched an investigation to determine if any leaders of last weekend's anti-war demonstrations here should be prosecuted under the new federal Anti-Riot Act.

Deputy attorney-general Richard Kleindienst told a press conference that "some" of the top policymakers of the New Mobilization Committee to End The War in Vietnam — sponsor of the mass March Saturday — are already under investigation.

●

"I don't want to mention names," he said, "but any time you have persons crossing state lines to cause violence, the justice department has the duty to investigate (such action) under the anti-riot statute."

Sporadic violence, including a window-smashing rampage against the justice department building Saturday by a few militant demonstrators, triggered the investigation, he said.

Windows were smashed in at least 76 nuildings in downtown Washington during the weekend by roving bands of militants. Other minor vandalism occurred. Police using tear gas arrested about 150 persons, most for disorderly conduct.

●

He acknowledged that "98.65 per cent" of the 250,000 demonstrators during the weekend were peaceful, "but the others came here with premeditation" to be violent.

"The steering committee of the new mobilization was aware this was going to happen and did nothing to stop it," Kleindienst charged.

New mobilization leaders, who claimed they took extensive measures to head off violence, including private "cool it" talks with militant groups and the deployment of more than 2,500 march marshals for crowd control, reacted with disbelief Tuesday.

"It's difficult to understand how bringing large numbers of people into Washington to demonstrate peacefully in a march and rally is in violation of the anti-riot statute," said spokesman Ted Johnson.

"The justice department was unable to limit our demonstration beforehand and now seems intent on diminishing its effect after the fact."

●

The anti-riot measure, part of the 1968 Civil Rights Act, is the same one under which the "Chicago 8" are currently being tried in connection with their activities during violent demonstrations at the Democractic national convention last year.

The act makes it a felony to cross state lines with intent to incite, organize or participate in a riot. Maximum penalty is five years' imprisonment and a $10,000 fine.

Civil Servant Total Steady But Salary Rise Continues

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of federal civil servants is being held at the present level or slightly reduced but salary increases are still driving up the costs of the public service.

Of the $67,000,000 additional spending estimates presented in the Commons Tuesday by the government, $40,000,000 is for pay increases for civil servants.

Total government spending for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1970, now is estimated at $11,924,000,000 with further supplementary estimates still to come.

Spending on Indian and Eskimo affairs will increase by more than $12,000,000 to $289,000,000.

Expansion of the bilingualism development program by the state secretary's department will cost $1,835,000.

The Canadian livestock feed board gets $1,000,000 for freight assistance on grain storage costs.

Food aid is increased by $13,745,000 but there is no ddditional expense because the money will come out of other and diminished programs.

A sum of $930,000 is provided for a Canadian police information centre in Ottawa.

Number of Prime Minister Trudeau's staff has been frozen at the present level of 46 after a recent increase of four.

The Senate gets an additional $760,000 for "information, utilities, materials and supplies and all other expenditures."

New loans, investments and advances include:

Canada's subscription as a member of the Caribbean regional development bank, $10,760,000.

Loans for the expansion of small businesses in the Yukon and Northwest Territories, $10,000,000.

Loans to Indians, $2,400,000.

Loan to Nova Scotia for construction of an end-loading ramp at Yarmouth, $430,000.

Mines Body Protests Tax Change Proposals

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia and Yukon Chamber of Mines said today that Ottawa's tax change proposals could lead to "a serious decline in domestic and foreign investment in mining."

In a telegram to Revenue Minister Edgar Benson, the chamber said it is vital that Ottawa continue to encourage mining and exploration, as it has in the past.

"Tax incentives suggested in the white paper would not appear to be adequate," the telegram said, referring to the federal government's white paper on taxation, released earlier this month.

It said the proposal to end gradually the three-year tax holiday for new mines would reduce incentives and so would changes the white paper proposes for mining depletion allowances.

In addition, the chamber opposes Ottawa's idea that the capital gains of prospectors should be taxed. It says the proposal will mean fewer prospectors, and therefore fewer new mines.

This, it says, will lead to "a reduction in the gross national product, taxation revenues and the standard of living of all Canadians."

The chamber says that in the B.C.-Yukon area, most of the potential fork mining growth is in large deposits of low-grade ore. Favorable tax laws are needed if these are to be developed.

"The economy of Western Canada, including northern regions, is to a great extent dependent upon basic resource development . . . if mining is depressed, we in the west have nothing to replace it."

Court Told Overtime Needless

VANCOUVER (CP)—By urging British Columbia mill workers to refuse to work beyond regular hours the International Woodworkers of America union is hoping to eliminate "needless" overtime, Alex Macdonald, New Democratic Party MLA for Vancouver East, said in Supreme Court Tuesday.

The Vancouver lawyer, appearing for the IWA, told Mr. Justice Dryer—in an injunction quest by three major B.C. forest firms—that the reason for the action is not to force the firms to re-open the current labor contract.

MacMillan Bloedel, Rayonier and Weldwood, who operate six mills in Vancouver and Port Alberni are seeking the injunction that would require the union to end its overtime ban.

The companies say the workers' refusal to work overtime has caused a serious cutback in production.

They allege the real reason for the union's action is a desire to get the contract re-opened for new wage talks. The contract does not expire until next June.

An estimated 3,000 workers are involved in the injunction application. The case is continuing.

Spy Police Abolished

LISBON (Reuters) — Premier Marcello Caetano today took a major step toward a more relaxed political atmosphere in Portugal by abolishing the internal and external security police.

The move came unexpectedly. Its announcement was buried in the middle of a communique on decisions taken at a cabinet meeting.

It said merely that a new directorate-general for security had been formed at the interior ministry and would immediately take over the functions of the security police force which, the communique said, is abolished.

Abolition of the force could mean greater freedom for the individual in Portugal, a greater liberalization—within certain limits—in the political sphere and a more popular image for Caetano's government.

Amphetamines Ban Urged In U.S. Crime Hearings

WASHINGTON (WP) — Two doctors told a congressional committee Tuesday that the manufacture and sale of amphetamines should be banned because their medical uses are limited.

The drugs are used mainly by thrill seekers to provide highs or in weight reduction programs where they are practically useless, the doctors told the House Select Committee on Crime.

The committee chairman, Rep. Claude Pepper (D-Fla.), raised the question of banning amphetamines, a drug that accounts for 8 per cent of all prescriptions written in the country.

"I can see no use for amphetamines. I would be in favor of banning them completely," said Dr. Benjamin J. Sheppard, a doctor and lawyer from Miami.

His view was backed by Dr. John D. Griffith, a psychiatrist and pharmacologist at Vanderbilt University School of Medicine, Nashville, Tenn.

"There is no place for these drugs," he said. "It is the consensus of the world scientific literature that the amphetamines are of very little benefit to mankind; they are, however, quite toxic."

Although 8 billion to 10 billion amphetamine pills are produced in America each year, Dr. Sidney Cohen of the National Institute of Mental Health estimated that "several thousand" of them would take care of the nation's legitimate medical needs.

The American Medical Association lists eight uses for amphetamines, but says only two of them are free from medical controversy. These two are for the treatment of narcolepsy, a rare sleeping sickness, and hyperkinetic behavior in children.

Other uses are for overweight, mild depression, fatigue, to stimulate patients who have taken depressant drugs such as barbiturates, help pain killing drugs work better and counteract sleepiness in people who have to remain awake for long periods.

Committee investigators have mine pills manufactured fall into illicit hands.

Alberni Valley Teachers Agree To Pay Increase

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Alberni Valley school board and teachers reached a 1970 salary settlement Monday for an 8.2 per cent average increase.

This raised the number of agreements to seven, covering about 8 per cent of British Columbia's 19,000 teachers. Others settled are Howe Sound, Smithers, Vanderhoof, Prince George, Nanaimo and Fort Nelson.

Another 19 districts have completed "piggyback" agreements, which are dependent on the settlements in neighboring areas.

This leaves 50 definitely going into arbitration, and about nine still holding voluntary negotiations.

Ladysmith Expects Boom

LADYSMITH — A $1,000,000 building boom is expected here in 1970 with final approval expected this week from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation for a 100-lot subdivision at Holland Creek Park.

Building permits issued to the end of October this year were $656,028.

Town council already has agreed to sell three of the view lots on the north side of Davis Road to Nanaimo Framing Ltd. on the condition that houses be built on them within three years.

Pollution Study Will Pack Punch

A federal scientific task force is completing studies for a broad program that will pack a powerful punch into pollution controls intended to protect the West Coast fisheries.

"We're just working on our final draft of recommendations to be submitted to the minister," Dr. Michael Waldichuk, a leading Canadian oceanographer, said here Tuesday.

Waldichuk—who provided the oceanographic data in the Greater Victoria sewerage study and strongly advocated inclusion of treatment plants —is official host of the Canadian Committee on Oceanography's annual meeting this week in the Empress Hotel.

His papers have been read at major international conferences on pollution control but he is better known on this coast as head oceanographer at the fisheries research station in Nanaimo. Recently he was picked for the key post of secretary to CCO, which coordinates most oceanographic activites in Canada by government departments, universities and industrial research teams.

BROAD STUDY

Waldichuk told a reporter the current West Coast study will have far-reaching ramifications.

"We'll be basically concerned with the biological aspects of pollution, that is, the effects of industry and sewage on aquatic resources," he said.

Measures to neutralize the harmful effects of pulp mill effluents will be high on the list but he warned the solutions will not be cheap.

"The pulp industry which now spends $40 million a year for pollution control, soon will be spending $250 million a year and, in the end, the consumer will have to pay for it," said Waldichuk.

He pointed out the threat from pulp mill effluent is growing because of the constantly expanding volume.

DEMAND TO GROW

"There is a high demand for forest products now and it is going to grow even higher, so we must be concerned with pulp mill effluents.

"Vancouver Island has six pulp mills and all of it borders fisheries waters."

He said the high cost of controls demands that they be efficient and effective and contended that any soundly based company will be able to live with the financial requirements.

Dr. Waldichuk indicated the study is more thorough-going than any before it.

"One thing we will be studying is the sub-lethal effects pulp mill effluent has on salmon," he said.

"We know that a certain level will kill the salmon, but a sub-lethal effect could equally ruin a salmon run."

SEE ONTARIO

He said an example of this situation already exists in Lake Erie where pollution has transformed the fish population in a detrimental manner as commercially desirable fish have been replaced by the hardier coarse fish such as carp.

Dr. Waldichuk said basic research in the sea does not have the same appeal as basic research in space so oceanography has been hampered by lack of money.

But he predicted current fiscal restrictions will give way to a rapid acceleration of oceanographic study in Canada, particularly on specific aspects, and a federal marine sciences centre will be established somewhere on the B.C. coast in the next decade, matching the facilities of the Bedford Institute in Nova Scotia.

Girls' Hostel To Open Dec. 2

Victoria Girls Hostel, in the works for more than a year, will officially open Dec. 2.

Mrs. John A. Di Castri, spokesman for the non-demoninational group responsible for the organization of the hostel, said Mayor Hugh Stephen has agreed to participate in the opening ceremonies.

It was Mayor Stephen who first suggested the need for a hostel in the community.

Designed to provide living accommodation and meals for up to 14 girls seeking employment in the city, the hostel, an older home on Fernwood, has been completely renovated by construction and allied industries.

Management provided the materials required for the revamp job while labor donated time and skills.

In addition to Stephen the opening will be attended by dignitaries from other municipalities, the provincial and federal governments and the construction industry.

Vancouver Appeal Ends Just Short

VANCOUVER (CP)—Vancouver's United Appeal drive closed today, with collections totalling $3,757,726, just short of the target of $3,900,000. The money goes to 60 agencies and chairman R. B. Stewart said failure to meet the target means some services will have to be cut.

Smiling on the Inside

Spine-tingling experience for 10-year-old Richard LeNoury and the old grey whale (who ain't what she used to be). Richard slipped away from a Frank Hobbs School tour of the Provincial Museum to bone up on whale anatomy at close range. Judging by the toothless grin, the whale, who spent 10 years in a box in pieces, is enjoying his popularity.

Crisis Over Beds Prompts Plea For Welfare Aid

Private Hospitals Badly Off

The province will be asked by the Greater Victoria Metropolitan Board of Health to increase welfare payments to private hospitals to prevent a desperate bed shortage in the Victoria area from worsening.

The board Tuesday decided to ask for "urgent consideration" of the increase, after reading a report on the sub-standard condition of several smaller private hospitals in the area.

The report was prepared by senior medical health officer, Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread.

After inspecting nine private hospitals in converted buildings, Whitbread said two of them should have been closed 16 months ago and the others phased out by 1971.

MAINLY WELFARE

"Closure of any of these hospitals would result in a catastrophe to the area as there is at present a long waiting list of patients requiring accommodation," he said.

The nine hospitals range in bed capacity from 12 to 45 with a total of 285 beds.

Welfare patients take up 203 of these beds, and hospital officials contend the provincial grants do not cover the cost of caring for these patients.

Whitbread said orders should be given to bring these hospitals up to provincial and municipal standards.

If improvements were ordered, however, some of the hospitals would likely close down, he said.

"In many cases the unwillingness on the part of management to maintain the buildings is due to a lack of income."

He said staffs are performing adequately in most of these hospitals despite salaries much lower than in the larger hospitals.

He said the increased welfare payments would mean that smaller hospitals could afford to meet the standards.

The board will also request the province to grant extension of the interim permits for the operation of the private hospitals in old buildings.

Whitbread said many owners are not maintaining the physical standards of the hospitals due to the short-term life expectancy of the hospitals.

"These hospital beds will be replaced when the 650 extended care beds have been constructed by the Regional Hospital Board," said Whitbread.

"We cannot expect construction of the extended care beds to be completed before 1971."

Board member and MLA-elect Dr. G. Scott Wallace said it is unlikely any of the 650 extended care beds approved for this area will be built before 1971.

"It's very nice to build new beds and tear down old ones," he said.

UNWISE MOVE

"What we really need are totally new beds."

Wallace said it would be unwise to exert pressure on small private hospitals to improve their facilities since they were trying to operate on less-than-adequate welfare rates.

"Financial support should be increased," he said. "If we lose any of these hospitals now the situation only gets worse."

Whitbread at the Oct. 15 health board meeting promised to name the older private hospitals that should be closed.

He did so for board members but did not make the names available to the press.

Ogden Point Work Three Days Behind

Pressure of work backed up during the six-week B.C. longshoremen strike has put Ogden Point shipping as much as three days behind schedule.

Port agent F. J. Ritchie said the problem is being felt at other Island ports and on the lower mainland as ships that lined up awaiting the end of the strike last week occupy all available berths.

The result is that longshore gangs are working to capacity and because of the great volume of cargo to be handled, there now are insufficient gangs to clear the docks.

★ ★ ★

Once the work load peak has been reached, possibly within a week or two, shipping should again approach a normal level.

As an example of the delay facing ships discharging general cargo to take on lumber, plywood, pulp, paper or grain at Ogden Point, the new CPR lumber carrier J. V. Clyne left Tuesday night instead of Saturday.

★ ★ ★

Only two gangs were available for work on the ship Tuesday, and only one assigned to the Kostis Prios, also loading lumber. The latter ship stood idle for a day until a longshore gang was available.

The 13 gangs based in Victoria are also dispatched to Chemainus, Cowichan Bay and Crofton when required.

One Victoria gang, sent to Cowichan Bay, worked overtime to clear the Bodenstein from port Tuesday.

The Japanese freighter Kozan Maru, waited at Ogden Point an extra day, until longshoremen were unable to unload her cargo of steel. She left port Tuesday.

★ ★ ★

A freighter with Japanese oranges is expected to dock at Ogden Point Monday, a longshoreman official said.

He said she would call here first rather than head for Vancouver directly "because the warehouses over there are plugged and can't handle the traffic."

He added that as many oranges as possible would be unloaded at Victoria during one day's work. These would be slated for sale on Vancouver Island.

Apathy: It Can Strike Anyone

By ROGER STONEBANKS

Political apathy replaced public apathy at a meeting of the Capital Region Planning Board Tuesday.

The board had arranged a regional study session — one of a series — on a look at downtown Victoria.

But when the scheduled time arrived, only three politicians were present — Victoria Ald. Ian Stewart, regional planning board chairman; Saanich Ald. Edith Gunning, and Oak Bay Ald. Frances Elford.

Also present were planning board director Tony Roberts, staff planner John Northey; city planner Geoff Greenhalgh; city manager Dennis Young; and a reporter from the Victoria Daily Times.

● ● ●

Notification had been extended to all members of the Capital Regional Board and every elected municipal official in the area, said Ald. Stewart.

And that is approximately 50 politicians, although a number of them are unable to attend day-time meetings because of their work. (Three persons — Central Saanich Mayor Archibald Galbraith, North Saanich Ald. Trevor Davis and Sidney Ald. S. G. Gardner had attended the earlier business meeting).

"Because of the poor attendance, I will have to call the meeting off," said Ald. Stewart.

Only three days ago, at a Parksville seminar of the Association of Vancouver Island Municipalities, 65 delegates from cities, towns, districts and villages up and down the island had discussed public apathy and made a number of suggestions to overcome this.

● ● ●

The apathy spread to Saanich public works committee Tuesday night, which was unable to pass motions because it lacked a quorum.

Earlier, council extended the membership of group B committees — which includes public works — to full council, or nine persons.

But only four showed up — chairman Ald. William Campbell and Aldermen Frank Waring, William Noel and Leslie Passmore. Also attending were seven municipal officials, two members of the public and two newspaper reporters.

At one point, where business was being held up pending the hopeful arrival of a fifth council member to make a quorum, Ald. Campbell said "it's very embarrassing."

And at another point, Ald. Noel deadpanned — "while we are talking about garbage and waiting for a quorum . . ."

● ● ●

The committee was informed that the new municipal garbage trucks have arrived and the service will start Jan. 17.

The municipality will advertise for staff and applications will be accepted from the staff of the present private contractor and municipal people "and we'll pick the best from both," said engineer Neville Life.

The two residents who waited unsuccessfully for the quorum, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Cox, asked that their property at 2680 Macdonald Drive be excluded from the sewerage enterprise area. The consensus was to turn down the request.

Finally, just over two hours after the public works committee meeting started, Ald. Alan Newberry arrived and a quorum was formed so decisions could be made.

Man Sentenced to 5 Years On Marijuana Trafficking

A 22-year-old Victoria man was sentenced in county court today to five years in the penitentiary for possession of marijuana for trafficking.

"It is clear you were cynically engaged in living off the weaknesses of others," Judge Montague Drake told Brock Douglas Flett of 428 Superior Street.

"The law takes a very serious view of this."

Crown counsel Edward St. J. Pollard said four packages containing 8.8 pounds of marijuana were found in a car driven by Flett on May 4.

NOT FIRST TIME

The car was stopped by Saanich police outside a house on Glanford Avenue. Four packages found in the back of the car were analysed as marijuana at the crime detection laboratory in Vancouver, and Flett's fingerprints were found on them.

Counsel said the car had a 1969 licence plate on the front and a 1968 plate on the back. Flett told police the owner of the car was in Wilkinson Road jail and the car had been loaned to him.

"The law has the responsibility of trying to stamp out trafficking in drugs," Pollard said, "and this is not the first time Flett has been before the courts.

"This is not a case for leniency but for deterring others from this practice."

Defence counsel C. A. Becker said a probation officer's report on Flett suggested a "minimum sentence," but Judge Drake noted that he had "a very poor record."

YOUTH WOUNDED IN STOMACH

A Sooke Road youth injured in a shooting accident Tuesday evening is in satisfactory condition at St. Joseph's Hospital today.

Harvey Heimbecker, 16, suffered a wound in the stomach when the .22 calibre rifle he was cleaning discharged.

Baird for Mayor, Not Alderman

Ald. Robert Baird is a candidate for mayor in the Dec. 6 municipal elections in Victoria.

The Times erroneously reported Tuesday that Baird is an official candidate for city council.

OWNER OF GOLD COINS FAILS TO SHOW AT CLINK

Rare gold coins held by Saanich police are attracting collectors — but so far the owner has failed to appear.

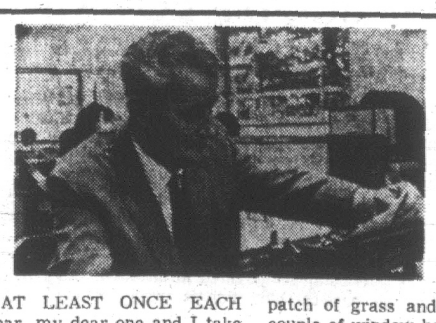

The coin collection was found by two brothers on a hike recently and turned over to police. It has been valued by experts at $5,000.

It seems quite a few people have lost gold coins.

Police Inspector John Post said today half a dozen collectors have been in touch to see if any of their lost coins have turned up in the find.

But so far nobody's description has been close to what police are holding — and not describing.

Post said coin collections are a favorite target for burglars and perhaps half a dozen are stolen annually in Saanich alone.

Arthur Mayse . . .

AT LEAST ONCE EACH year, my dear one and I take a long, hard look at our surroundings, and decide it's high time we hunted another place. This seizure may occur in soggy, miserable little February, or perhaps in June when the lawn grass grows fast, and the weeds even faster.

In any case, the pattern follows more or less these lines.

We have been moiling and toiling for several hours when one of us straightens a weary back. The other yanks a handful of chickweed or picks up one more blowdown branch, then follows suit.

Win says, "I've been thinking."

"Yeah. Me too."

★

Then whichever of us gets to it first airs the dark, rebellious thought.

"We don't have to do this, you know. We could find ourselves a place that didn't have a garden. Just a little patch of grass and maybe a couple of window boxes."

"Or it could be on a rock outcrop," the other chips in.

We keep talking it up, and pretty soon we have evolved a mental picture of this dream-home.

★

It will be neither too large nor too small. It will have trees, but not so many that leaf-raking will become a burden. Naturally, the basement will be dry, and the taxes low-low.

Our next step in the progression is to run through the Houses for Sale ads, which offer the most inspired writing you'll find in print.

To show you what I mean, here are a few choice snatches from a specimen blurb:

"Here is a distinguished six-room home in an exclusive residential district."

(Depends on how you interpret "distinguished." I thought it looked kind of funny, with its breakneck roof-slope that swooped to a gimicky little peak above the front door. But the district was exclusive, all right, and especially in icy winter weather. Its slick hills excluded traffic so effectively that only those who had no recourse would attempt them.)

I could go on about the "fine rockery" which consisted of a few shale slabs stuck on end like so many gravestones, and the arbitrary slopes of thinly-grassed fill that became "three rolling terraces."

★

But it's enough to state that we once owned the Toronto house in question, and were so impressed by the description that we came within an ace of whipping it off the market before someone else grabbed it.

Anyway, the upshot of this occasional discontent is that we hop in the car and go searching for a house closer to our hearts' desire.

This pursuit began when we were still battling Ontario board doors that only a crowbar could open — or its neighbor with the patch of poison oak out back that I mistook for strayed Virginia creeper.

Once, though, we really began to think we had it made.

But before we could get excited about our find, the man dusting his rose bushes next door sidled over the property line.

"Do you know where the storm water off the back slope goes?" he asked.

We didn't, and it was a point worth considering.

★

He pointed his dust gun and said, "Into that basement."

Eventually, a time comes in such questings when we realize that there are good houses, bad houses and so-so houses. But no dream-houses.

With that fact re-discovered, we are ready to go home to a haven that may be less than perfect, but has improved remarkably during our absence.

There was the place accessible only by a string of planks across mud. I teetered off the second board, plunged ankle-deep, and pulled one foot out of its shoe. Then I tried to free the other foot, and lost that shoe. Finally, groping for both shoes, I fell into the wallow, and escaped only after some stern hauling by my wife and the builder's agent.

It was a nice place, but we decided as I recovered my shoes with the help of a handy two-by-four that it was not for us.

Neither was the stately old white elephant that boasted a completely sinister black marble bath — or the ranch-type with the warped cupboard doors that only a crowbar could open — or its neighbor with the patch of poison oak out back that I mistook for strayed Virginia creeper.

UNDER ANTI-RIOT ACT

March Chiefs Probed

By PAUL W. VALENTINE

WASHINGTON (WP) — The justice department has launched an investigation to determine if any leaders of last weekend's anti-war demonstrations here should be prosecuted under the new federal Anti-Riot Act.

Deputy attorney-general Richard Kleindienst told a press conference that "some" of the top policymakers of the New Mobilization Committee to End The War in Vietnam — sponsor of the mass March Saturday — are already under investigation.

●

"I don't want to mention names," he said, "but any time you have persons crossing state lines to cause violence, the justice department has the duty to investigate (such action) under the anti-riot statute."

Sporadic violence, including a window-smashing rampage against the justice department building Saturday by a few militant demonstrators, triggered the investigation, he said.

Windows were smashed in at least 76 nuildings in downtown Washington during the weekend by roving bands of militants. Other minor vandalism occurred. Police using tear gas arrested about 150 persons, most for disorderly conduct.

●

He acknowledged that "98.65 per cent" of the 250,000 demonstrators during the weekend were peaceful, "but the others came here with premeditation" to be violent.

"The steering committee of the new mobilization was aware this was going to happen and did nothing to stop it," Kleindienst charged.

New mobilization leaders, who claimed they took extensive measures to head off violence, including private "cool it" talks with militant groups and the deployment of more than 2,500 march marshals for crowd control, reacted with disbelief Tuesday.

"It's difficult to understand how bringing large numbers of people into Washington to demonstrate peacefully in a march and rally is in violation of the anti-riot statute," said spokesman Ted Johnson.

"The justice department was unable to limit our demonstration beforehand and now seems intent on diminishing its effect after the fact."

The anti-riot measure, part of the 1968 Civil Rights Act, is the same one under which the "Chicago 8" are currently being tried in connection with their activities during violent demonstrations at the Democractic national convention last year.

The act makes it a felony to cross state lines with intent to incite, organize or participate in a riot. Maximum penalty is five years' imprisonment and a $10,000 fine.

Civil Servant Total Steady But Salary Rise Continues

OTTAWA (CP) — The number of federal civil servants is being held at the present level or slightly reduced but salary increases are still driving up the costs of the public service.

Of the $67,000,000 additional spending estimates presented in the Commons Tuesday by the government, $40,000,000 is for pay increases for civil servants.

Total government spending for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1970, now is estimated at $11,924,000,000 with further supplementary estimates still to come.

Spending on Indian and Eskimo affairs will increase by more than $12,000,000 to $289,000,000.

Expansion of the bilingualism development program by the state secretary's department will cost $1,835,000.

The Canadian livestock feed board gets $1,000,000 for freight assistance on grain storage costs.

Food aid is increased by $13,745,000 but there is no additional expense because the money will come out of other and diminished programs.

A sum of $930,000 is provided for a Canadian police information centre in Ottawa.

Number of Prime Minister Trudeau's staff has been frozen at the present level of 46 after a recent increase of four.

The Senate gets an additional $760,000 for "information, utilities, materials and supplies and all other expenditures."

New loans, investments and advances include:

Canada's subscription as a member of the Caribbean regional development bank, $10,760,000.

Loans for the expansion of small businesses in the Yukon and Northwest Territories, $10,000,000.

Loans to Indians, $2,400,000.

Loan to Nova Scotia for construction of an end-loading ramp at Yarmouth, $430,000.

Amphetamines Ban Urged In U.S. Crime Hearings

WASHINGTON (WP) — Two doctors told a congressional committee Tuesday that the manufacture and sale of amphetamines should be banned because their medical uses are limited.

The drugs are used mainly by thrill seekers to provide highs or in weight reduction programs where they are practically useless, the doctors told the House Select Committee on Crime.

The committee chairman, Rep. Claude Pepper (D-Fla.), raised the question of banning amphetamines, a drug that accounts for 8 per cent of all prescriptions written in the country.

"I can see no use for amphetamines. I would be in favor of banning them completely," said Dr. Benjamin J. Sheppard, a doctor and lawyer from Miami.

His view was backed by Dr. John D. Griffith, a psychiatrist and pharmacologist at Vanderbilt University School of Medicine, Nashville, Tenn.

"There is no place for these drugs," he said. "It is the consensus of the world scientific literature that the amphetamines are of very little benefit to mankind; they are, however, quite toxic."

Although 8 billion to 10 billion amphetamine pills are produced in America each year, Dr. Sidney Cohen of the National Institute of Mental Health estimated that "several thousand" of them would take care of the nation's legitimate medical needs.

The American Medical Association lists eight uses for amphetamines, but says only two of them are free from medical controversy. These two are for the treatment of narcolepsy, a rare sleeping sickness, and hyperkinetic behavior in children.

Other uses are for overweight, mild depression, fatigue, to stimulate patients who have taken depressant drugs such as barbiturates, help pain killing drugs work better and counteract sleepiness in people who have to remain awake for long periods.

Committee investigators have mine pills manufactured fall into illicit hands.

Alberni Valley Teachers Agree To Pay Increase

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Alberni Valley school board and teachers reached a 1970 salary settlement Monday for an 8.2 per cent average increase.

This raised the number of agreements to seven, covering about 8 per cent of British Columbia's 19,000 teachers. Others settled are Howe Sound, Smithers, Vanderhoof, Prince George, Nanaimo and Fort Nelson.

Another 19 districts have completed "piggyback" agreements, which are dependent on the settlements in neighboring areas.

This leaves 50 definitely going into arbitration, and about nine still holding voluntary negotiations.

Pollution Study Will Pack Punch

A federal scientific task force is completing studies for a broad program that will pack a powerful punch into pollution controls intended to protect the West Coast fisheries.

"We're just working on our final draft of recommendations to be submitted to the minister," Dr. Michael Waldichuk, a leading Canadian oceanographer, said here Tuesday.

Waldichuk—who provided the oceanographic data in the Greater Victoria sewerage study and strongly advocated inclusion of treatment plants—is official host of the Canadian Committee on Oceanography's annual meeting this week in the Empress Hotel.

His papers have been read at major international conferences on pollution control but he is better known on this coast as head oceanographer at the fisheries research station in Nanaimo. Recently he was picked for the key post of secretary to CCO, which coordinates most oceanographic activites in Canada by government departments, universities and industrial research teams.

BROAD STUDY

Waldichuk told a reporter the current West Coast study will have far-reaching ramifications.

"We'll be basically concerned with the biological aspects of pollution, that is, the effects of industry and sewage on aquatic resources," he said.

Measures to neutralize the harmful effects of pulp mill effluents will be high on the list but he warned the solutions will not be cheap.

"The pulp industry which now spends $40 million a year for pollution control, soon will be spending $250 million a year and, in the end, the consumer will have to pay for it," said Waldichuk.

He pointed out the threat from pulp mill effluent is growing because of the constantly expanding volume.

DEMAND TO GROW

"There is a high demand for forest products now and it is going to grow even higher, so we must be concerned with pulp mill effluents.

"Vancouver Island has six pulp mills and all of it borders fisheries waters."

He said the high cost of controls demands that they be efficient and effective and contended that any soundly based company will be able to live with the financial requirements.

Dr. Waldichuk indicated the study is more thorough-going than any before it.

"One thing we will be studying is the sub-lethal effects pulp mill effluent has on salmon," he said.

"We know that a certain level will kill the salmon, but a sub-lethal effect could equally ruin a salmon run."

SEE ONTARIO

He said an example of this situation already exists in Lake Erie where pollution has transformed the fish population in a detrimental manner as commercially desirable fish have been replaced by the hardier coarse fish such as carp.

Dr. Waldichuk said basic research in the sea does not have the same appeal as basic research in space so oceanography has been hampered by lack of money.

But he predicted current fiscal restrictions will give way to a rapid acceleration of oceanographic study in Canada, particularly on specific aspects, and a federal marine sciences centre will be established somewhere on the B.C. coast in the next decade, matching the facilities of the Bedford Institute in Nova Scotia.

Girls' Hostel To Open Dec. 2

Victoria Girls Hostel, in the works for more than a year, will officially open Dec. 2.

Mrs. John A. Di Castri, spokesman for the non-denominational group responsible for the organization of the hostel, said Mayor Hugh Stephen has agreed to participate in the opening ceremonies.

It was Mayor Stephen who first suggested the need for a hostel in the community.

Designed to provide living accommodation and meals for up to 14 girls seeking employment in the city, the hostel, an older home on Fernwood, has been completely renovated by construction and allied industries.

Management provided the materials required for the revamp job while labor donated time and skills.

In addition to Stephen the opening will be attended by dignitaries from other municipalities, the provincial and federal governments and the construction industry.

Court Told Overtime Needless

VANCOUVER (CP)—By urging British Columbia mill workers to refuse to work beyond regular hours the International Woodworkers of America union is hoping to eliminate "needless" overtime, Alex Macdonald, New Democratic Party MLA for Vancouver East, said in Supreme Court Tuesday.

The Vancouver lawyer, appearing for the IWA, told Mr. Justice Dryer—in an injunction quest by three major B.C. forest firms—that the reason for the action is not to force the firms to re-open the current labor contract.

MacMillan Bloedel, Rayonier and Weldwood, who operate six mills in Vancouver and Port Alberni are seeking the injunction that would require the union to end its overtime ban.

The companies say the workers' refusal to work overtime has caused a serious cutback in production.

They allege the real reason for the union's action is a desire to get the contract re-opened for new wage talks. The contract does not expire until next June.

An estimated 3,000 workers are involved in the injunction application. The case is continuing.

Vancouver Appeal Ends Just Short

VANCOUVER (CP)—Vancouver's United Appeal drive closed today, with collections totalling $3,757,726, just short of the target of $3,900,000. The money goes to 60 agencies and chairman R. B. Stewart said failure to meet the target means some services will have to be cut.

'Wowee, Fantastic' Shout Pair as Moon Dust Flies

HOUSTON (AP) — Two lively American astronauts made a bull's-eye landing on the moon today, raised their flag and wise-cracked through a four-hour exploration of the black, powdery surface.

Before returning to their lunar ferry Intrepid, they set up five scientific instruments powered by the first nuclear generator on the moon.

In landing on the Ocean of Storms, Charles (Pete) Conrad and Alan L. Bean carried man's quest for the unknown to that alien soil a second time. They opened a new age of discovery, the first detailed exploration of the moon.

Their moonwalk was spoiled for earthlings when a camera transmitting the first color television pictures for the moon failed after 45 minutes. Experts at the Manned Spacecraft Centre believed the camera was accidentally pointed at the sun, burning the sensitive image tube. There was little hope it could be repaired.

The moment they landed on the moon, Conrad shouted: "Outstanding!" And Bean exclaimed: "I can't wait to get outside!" (See page 3.)

They were two jubilant men, chattering like a couple of chipmunks as they went about the important business of exploring the strange world where the gravity force is only one-sixth that on earth.

There was excitement in Conrad's voice when he spotted an unmanned Surveyor spacecraft resting only 600 feet away in the crater that had been their target for the pinpoint landing.

BOTH WERE HAPPY

Both men were exuberant as they gathered rocks and spotted strange mounds of rubble that they described as "fantastic." Conrad's cackling laugh became a familiar sound.

"Wowee" was a favorite expression as Conrad and Bean prowled the surface, ranging more than 1,000 feet to set up the experiments and to inspect the mounds and what appeared to them to be fresh crater.

The astronauts were amazed at the thick, black dust that darkened their space suits as they moved like ghostly figures in a weird surrounding.

"We're really filthy," Conrad reported.

The third member of the expedition, Richard F. Gordon Jr., became almost a forgotten man as he orbited some 65 miles overhead in the Yankee Clipper command ship, waiting for Conrad and Bean to complete their 31½-hour exploration trip.

But Gordon helped pinpoint the landing site by spotting both Intrepid and the Surveyor from his high-flying outpost.

Conrad and Bean steered Intrepid to its perfect landing on the eastern edge of the Ocean of Storms at 1:54:29 a.m. EST and became the third and fourth humans to leave their imprint in the lunar dust.

TWO STARTED WALKS

The first of two planned moonwalks started at 3:44 a.m. when Conrad backed down a nine-rung ladder and stepped ashore in the new world. Bean followed 31 minutes later.

Conrad spent a total of three hours 44 minutes outside and Bean an even three hours in temperatures above 150 degrees.

After stowing their gear and eating, they planned eight hours sleep, resting for the second excursion set to start at 9:32 p.m. today.

"We won't have any trouble sleeping tonight," Conrad reported after the exhausting walk.

Blastoff from the moon is slated for 6:23 a.m. Thursday and a linkup with the Yankee Clipper at 11:02 a.m. After an extra day in lunar orbit to photograph future landing sites, the three head for home and a splashdown in the Pacific.

The astronauts reported the soil was thicker and blacker than that in the Sea of Tranquility where Apollo 11 pilots Neil A. Armstrong and Edwin E. Aldrin made man's first lunar landing in July.

"Your boots dig into the soil quite a bit," Bean said. "If you don't pick up your feet you really kick a load of dirt in front of you."

A-Power Up There

Powered by an atomic thermoelectric generator, foreground in drawing at left, the complex experimental setup looks like this as astronauts Charles Conrad and Alan Bean spend more than 31 hours on the moon. The astronauts, shown at right in their moon outfits, are making the first detailed exploration of the surface in the Ocean of Storms. The scientific package will be left on the moon and is expected to beam data back to earth for a year or perhaps two. (AP Wirephotos.)

LITTLE HOPE HELD CAMERA WILL OPERATE

The second moon walk of astronauts Charles Conrad and Alan Bean is scheduled to begin at 9:40 p.m. today when Conrad steps to the lunar surface, followed seven minutes later by Bean.

The walk is scheduled to be covered for earthbound viewers beginning at 9 p.m. on Channel 8 and at 9:30 p.m. on Channels 2 and 6.

However, Apollo officials hold scant hope that the color camera taken to the moon will function. It failed early today but the astronauts will attempt to activate it at 9:32 p.m. before they step to the moon's surface.

Poverty Prober Warns of Riots

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada will be rocked with riots within five years unless poverty-ridden people achieve a decisive victory, Frederick Joyce, director of the Senate committee on poverty, said Tuesday night.

He told a news conference he feels Vancouver would be likely place for riots to begin.

"You have a really big welfare-poverty problem here," said Joyce, noting that Vancouver's mild climate drew down-and-outers from many parts of the country.

The committee, headed by Senator David Croll, is holding poverty hearings here today and Thursday.

The committee began its hearings in Ottawa last April and since then has held hearings in Halifax, Charlottetown and Winnipeg.

Mr. Joyce directs a staff of eight researchers and two secretaries who back up the committee. He said his people are still looking "for an authoritative statement on what causes poverty."

5% LIMIT URGED ON PAY BOOSTS

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Trudeau said in the Commons Tuesday he supports a suggestion that wage increases be limited to 5 per cent and price increases to 2½ per cent for a certain period.

He was replying to Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, who attributed the suggestion to John H. Young, chairman of the prices and incomes commission, in a Tuesday speech at Regina.

Freeze Cuts School Plans

By BOB MITCHELL

Spokesmen for two Capital Region school boards said today the tight money situation in provincial school construction financing could slow education department approval of projects already approved by ratepayers in referendums.

The government announced Tuesday lack of capital funds for school construction has forced a ban on all construction referendums and bylaws in Dec. 6 civic elections.

Resources Minister Ray Williston made the announcement for Education Minister Donald Brothers who is in Paris this week.

Williston said classroom needs for 1970 will be approved on an individual and emergency basis and, in an interview today, indicated the restriction will also apply to projects from past referendums that are currently awaiting education department approval.

The government move affects a total of 34 referendums in B.C., including the following Island districts: Cowichan, Qualicum, Alberni, Courtenay, Campbell River and Gulf Islands.

VIC WEST HIT?

Trustee Peter Bunn, chairman of Greater Victoria school board buildings and grounds committee, said today a number of projects already under way from previous referendums could be delayed by the tight money situation.

An addition to Victoria West elementary has been at the education department since July awaiting approval to call tenders, Bunn said.

"The most reprehensible thing is that the minister—little Brothers—should stand up at the trustees convention in October and say we should aim at building 1,000 classrooms a year.

"Then the moment he's out of the country, big Ray (Williston) comes in and announces this, and that's when you find out who's really in command.

"The whole philosophy of education building in B.C. is 'We build today for yesterday,' when we should be building today for tomorrow."

Full Planning Study For Gulf Area Urged

The Capital Regional Board will be asked next week to approve an immediate start to a full planning study in the Gulf Islands.

The request will be made by the Capital Region Planning Board, which at its meeting Tuesday received a feasibility study on the islands which will be forwarded to the regional board.

The study, prepared over the last few months by planning board officials, details the "unregulated and extensive development" in the Gulf Islands.

Figures and maps showed a rapid increase in subdivision over the last few years, with subdivisions scattering in different places.

'WITHOUT GOALS'

The feasibility study said development is occuring without prior goals for the islands and objectives to achieve these goals.

Small lot subdivision (roughly two acres and less) had produced 3,144 lots between 1959 and 1968, "a very high figure comparable to a metropolitan suburb," said planning board staff member John Northey.

Large-parcel vacant land sales between 1960 and 1968 showed 8,100 acres involved — almost twice the land area of the city of Victoria. Northey called this "large, even in metropolitan centres."

Total sales, vacant and improved land, in the same period showed the dollar value more than tripling — from $2.1 million in 1960 to $7.7 million in 1968.

700% INCREASE

Vacant land value trends saw some property increasing by as much as 700 per cent in the same period.

Trends indicated a higher percentage of permanent homes in new subdivisions — 55 per cent of dwellings being erected on Salt Spring Island were permanent, although in the outer islands 72 per cent were summer or temporary.

Population, however, remained steady — it was 3,018 in 1961 and 3,151 in 1966, an increase of 133. But this is explained by the fact census

ARCTIC MELTING GREAT FOR RUSSIANS BUT . . .

Scientist Fears Ice Age

By JOHN MIKA

Every motorist stepping on the gas is speeding the world straight into another ice age.

The cold collision could come within 1,000 years —many of our lifetimes away but only an instant in geological time.

That's what the dean of Canada's oceanographer's worries about in his retirement.

He's Dr. J. P. Tully, who turns 63 later this month after a distinguished career as head of the Pacific fisheries research group from 1945 to 1966 and secretary of the Canadian Committee on Oceanography until a few months ago.

During that time he became internationally recognized as an expert in such areas as prediction of pollution in oceans, hydraulics of seaways, airborne radiation and the mechanics of heating and cooling in the sea.

Tall, muscular and vigorous despite his white hair, he exudes humor and warmth as he listens to the dreams of the "youngsters" at the conference, but his own tale warns of a nightmare coming if man continues thoughtlessly defiling his environment.

Because of his speciailties, reporters asked him for comment on Russian suggestions for warming up the Arctic Ocean to provide better transportation possibilities.
